Preface

The Graduate Medical Education Directory (93rd edition), published by the American Medical Association (AMA), lists programs accredited by the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education (ACGME).

The Directory provides medical students with a list of accredited graduate medical education (GME) programs in the United States, which aids them in making important professional decisions. State licensing boards, specialty societies, and hospitals refer to the Directory to verify the authenticity of programs presented by physicians who wish to qualify for licensure, certification, or hospital privileges. The Directory provides a unique historical record of accredited GME programs and background information about the ACGME accreditation process.

Contents of the Directory

- Section I—Graduate Medical Education Information—provides descriptions of various organizations involved in GME, including the ACGME, National Resident Matching Program (NRMP), Electronic Residency Application Service (ERAS), and Educational Commission for Foreign Medical Graduates (ECFMG), as well as information on AMA products, projects, and initiatives relevant to medical students, residents/fellows, program directors, and academic physicians.
- Section II—Specialty/Subspecialty Information and Data—provides descriptions of and data for all specialties/subspecialties with ACGME-accredited residency/fellowship programs and/or ACGME Program Requirements in effect. Also included are subspecialties for which a member board of the American Board of Medical Specialties (ABMS) offers certification.
- Section III—Accredited Graduate Medical Education Programs—as the official list of ACGME-accredited programs, generally reflects accreditation actions completed by December of the previous year. The data published in this edition were transferred from the ACGME to the AMA on January 16, 2008. Programs with withdrawal dates after this date are included in Section III. Section III provides program name, sponsoring institution, major participating institution(s), program director name, address, and phone/fax numbers, e-mail address, accredited program length, ACGME approved/offered positions, and program ID number. Specialties and subspecialties are listed in alphabetical order. Programs within each specialty or subspecialty are listed in alphabetical order by state and city. A list of accredited transitional year programs offered by hospitals or groups of hospitals is also included. Newly appointed program directors since the publication of last year's Directory are noted with an asterisk. (Note: The Directory may include programs on probation. To check a program's current accreditation status, go to the ACGME Web site, www.acgme.org, click on "public," then click on "Search Through Accredited Programs and Sponsors" to look up information about programs and sponsors, including current accreditation status.)
- Section IV—New and Withdrawn Programs—lists GME programs newly accredited since the publication of the 2007-2008 edition of the Directory and programs that are no longer accredited to offer GME as of December 31, 2007, or earlier.
- Section V—Graduate Medical Education Teaching Institutions—lists institutions and organizations that sponsor or participate in GME programs. Teaching institution listings include type of affiliation (sponsor and/or participant) and are listed alphabetically by state and city. Institution listings include the name and address of the institution, medical school affiliations (as verified biennially by the deans of accredited US medical schools), a list of the specialties and subspecialties in which the institution provides training, and the institution identification number.

- Appendix A—Combined Specialty Programs—provides information on programs that offer combined specialty training. Combined training consists of a coherent educational experience in two or more closely related specialty or subspecialty programs. The educational plan for combined training is approved by the specialty board of each of the specialties to assure that resident physicians completing combined training are eligible for board certification in each of the component specialties. Each specialty or subspecialty program is separately accredited by the ACGME through its respective specialty review committee. The duration of combined training is longer than any one of its component specialty programs standing alone, and shorter than all of its component specialty programs together.
- Appendix B—Medical Specialty Board Certification Requirements—contains information about the American Board of Medical Specialties (ABMS) and the certification requirements for each of the 24 member boards of the ABMS. Certification is the process by which a medical specialty board grants recognition to a physician who has met certain predetermined qualifications, as specified by the board. Certification requirements are also published by and available from each medical specialty board. Questions concerning certification requirements should be directed to the particular specialty board office listed in Appendix B.
- Appendix C—Medical Schools in the United States—contains a list of US medical schools accredited by the Liaison Committee on Medical Education (LCME), including the identification number, name, and location of each LCME-accredited medical school.
- Appendix D—Graduate Medical Education Glossary—defines various terms commonly used in GME.
- Appendix E—Listings of Subspecialty and Fellowship Programs—provides information on subspecialty and fellowship programs outside the purview of the ACGME accreditation process.
- Appendix F—Medical Licensure Information—contains an article on the basics of medical licensure, in addition to information on GME-related licensure policies of state medical boards, as published in 2008 edition of State Medical Licensure Requirements and Statistics.

Production of the Directory

The work of the ACGME's review committees, which review and evaluate programs and sponsoring institutions, provide the basis for program and institutional information included in Sections III through V of the Directory. The ACGME shares its data on accreditation actions and program changes with the AMA quarterly for the exclusive purpose of maintaining an accurate database to benefit programs, residents, applicants, and the public. The AMA, in turn, shares with the ACGME information collected through its annual survey of GME programs, but program directors are reminded that most review committees require prompt notification in writing of changes in the program's leadership. Providing information on program director changes through the National GME Census does not meet this requirement. In addition, most review committees require a current copy of the curriculum vitae for new program directors.

The Directory, as the official list of ACGME-accredited programs, generally reflects accreditation actions completed by December of the previous year. The data published in this edition were transferred from the ACGME to the AMA on January 16, 2008. Readers are reminded that accreditation actions and related changes can alter the ACGME program population on a daily basis, and that the Directory serves only as a "snapshot" of this population at a given moment. For the most current information on ACGME-accredited programs, consult the ACGME Web site: www.acgme.org.

The data for combined programs listed in Appendix A were obtained via the National GME Census (see Section I for more information).

Disclaimer

It is the AMA's understanding that all institutions listed in the Graduate Medical Education Directory are required by law to include the phrase "EEO, M/F/D/V" (Equal Employment Opportunity, Minority/Female/Disabled/Veteran) on any information distributed for public view.

Back Issues of the Directory

Copies of previous editions of the Directory are available for purchase at $25 per copy. For more information or to order, please call 312 464-5333. In addition, the CD-ROM version of the Directory contains Adobe Acrobat files of editions from 1996-1997 to the present.

Special Acknowledgment to the ACGME

The AMA gratefully acknowledges the cooperation of the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education (ACGME) in supplying the list of programs accredited by the ACGME and sponsoring/participating institutions and relevant information about the ACGME and its accreditation process. The AMA thanks all RRC executive directors and accreditation administrators as well as ACGME staff Jeanne Heard, MD, PhD, Ingrid Philibert, John Nysten, MBA, Rebecca Miller, MS, and Julie Jacob for their many ongoing contributions to the Directory.

Acknowledgments

Many people contributed to the publication of this edition of the Graduate Medical Education Directory. In addition to collaborative efforts with the ACGME (see "Special Acknowledgment," above), the ABMS and staff of the member boards of the ABMS provided requirements for certification in each of the medical specialties and subspecialties.

Special acknowledgment is also given to the following groups and individuals:

- AMA Department of Data Collection, for data collection and information resources management: Chris Mathews, Lydia Cruz, John Wilson, P J Shoulders, and Tammy Stockton.
- Association of American Medical Colleges, for its collaboration with the AMA in collecting data on combined programs (see Appendix A) via the National GME Census: Jennifer Faerberg and Jason Cantow.

- AMA Book Group (listed on p. ii).
- AMA Medical Education Group, for data cleaning, QA, and editorial advising and assistance: Sarah Brotherton, PhD, Sylvia Etzel, Jacqueline Drake, Barbara Schneidman, MD, Barbara Barzansky, PhD, Jeanette Harmon, Dorothy Grant-Bryant, Enza Perrone, and Arcia Washington.

In addition, we would like to acknowledge the many contributions of the following individuals/organizations for assistance with the indicated sections/appendices of this book:

Section I

- Careers in Medicine—George V Richard, PhD
- Choosing a Medical Specialty—Rebecca Gierhahn, AMA Medical Student Section
- Transitioning to Residency: What Medical Students Need to Know—Phyllis Kopriva, AMA Minority Affairs Consortium

2008 AMA Health Care Advocacy Agenda

The AMA believes that all Americans are worthy of a fair and affordable health system. At the center of the AMA's vision is the concept that every American has health insurance. And that all patients maintain the freedom to choose their own doctors and health plans, maintain control over their own care, and receive the best care possible. Specifically:

The AMA urges lawmakers to implement a system of tax credits to enable individuals to buy health insurance.

Under current law, Medicare will make deep cuts in payments to doctors every year until 2015. This policy erodes patient access to care and is a barrier to practice innovations. Congress and the next Administration need to permanently replace the flawed payment formula.

Medical lawsuits are driving up health costs for everyone and making it hard for many to find a doctor. The AMA seeks reasonable limits on the noneconomic damages juries can award so that doctors aren't forced to move, cut services or go out of business.

Physicians and other health providers must work with government and private payers on strategies to restrain rising health care costs while maintaining quality of care. Medical science and technology have moved forward at a lightning pace. Patients are ready for the American health system to follow suit. The AMA is committed to:

- Finding new ways to enable doctors to use promising new technology
- Pioneering new methods to measure and improve the quality of care
- Preventing errors by studying ones that have happened, without the threat of lawsuits
- Directing more resources and effort toward disease prevention
- Helping Americans lead more healthful lifestyles
- Eliminating gaps in care, particularly for racial and ethnic minority patients, the elderly, and low-income families
- Preparing better for large-scale health care emergencies

America's patients will be best served when we eliminate the disproportionate influence of insurers and government into medical decision-making. These important decisions must be placed in the hands of patients and physicians.

Our nation needs a well-trained medical work force and more doctors in primary care. We must make sure our medical education stays the best in the world, and make paying for it less burdensome. So too must we address the barriers that threaten the viability of many physician practices, such as:

- Payments that do not reflect the true cost of providing care
- Health insurers' deceptive business practices
- Antitrust rules that restrict doctors from negotiating with health insurance companies

As physicians and medical students, we see firsthand every day how urgently our patients need a better health system. Together, we can shape one America truly deserves.

Graduate Medical Education Directory

Includes contact information for 8,500 ACGME-accredited and combined specialty programs and 1,700 GME teaching institutions. Also included are medical specialty board certification requirements, a list of US medical schools, and a GME glossary.

OP416708DIB $78 ($58 for AMA members)

Graduate Medical Education Library on CD-ROM

Combines all information from the text version of the Directory with advanced search functions to help you find the program or institution you're looking for. Its Web browser interface allows for quick, easy access to all program and institution data and links to program Web sites; XML format allows for quick data sorts and program comparison. Also includes copies of each Directory since 1996-1997.

Electronic State-level GME Data

Aggregate statistics for each state on all resident physicians, in Adobe Acrobat format. Specific information available by state and specialty includes the number of resident physicians according to gender, race/ethnicity, and type of medical school attended. In addition, readers can determine the number of resident physicians training in the same state where they attended medical school.

Fellowship and Residency Electronic Interactive Database Access (FREIDA) Online®

FREIDA Online is a free Internet database of approximately 8,500 graduate medical education programs accredited by the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education (ACGME) or approved by member boards of the American Board of Medical Specialties.

Users of FREIDA Online can search the database by specialty/subspecialty or state/region, among other criteria. The SearchPlus feature also allows users to compare programs by features of importance, such as number of first year positions, salary, and program setting. In addition, FREIDA Online also displays aggregate statistics for each specialty and subspecialty, providing averages and percents, for example, on the average number of faculty per program in the specialty, or the average number of hours on-duty.

AMA student and resident members can save their favorite programs in an electronic folder and can print their own mailing labels to contact programs.

GME programs update data for FREIDA Online via the National GME Census, an annual survey conducted by the AMA and Association of American Medical Colleges. The survey instrument, GME Track, is available online at www.aamc.org/gmetrack.

Programs: Modifying Your FREIDA Online Listing

In addition to providing data via the National GME Census, as explained above, program directors and staff can also modify the basic information that appears on FREIDA Online throughout the year by accessing www.ama-assn.org/ama/pub/category/5598.html.

For example, if there is a new program director or a new contact person, you can make these changes on FREIDA Online directly. Changes are reviewed by FREIDA staff before the data are updated; changes take approximately 2 weeks to process.

FREIDA Online Listings: Basic and Expanded

All programs listed in FREIDA include the following Basic Listing:

- Program name
- Program identifier (eg, 120-36-21-000)
- Specialty/subspecialty (eg, family medicine)
- Program director (name, mailing address, phone, fax, e-mail, Web address)
- Person to contact for more information about the program (name, mailing address, phone, fax, e-mail)
- Accredited length; required length
- Accepting applications
- Program start date
- Participates in ERAS
- Affiliated with US government
- Institution list (sponsor and participant[s])

In addition, programs that select the Expanded Detailed Listing option (as the majority of programs do) provide the following information to students and residents:

General information

- Comments (used to highlight special qualities about the program, such as special features or description of surrounding hospital setting)
- Total program size (by year)
- Primary teaching site (eg, City University Hospital)
- Primary teaching site uses electronic medical records
- Program best described as (eg, community-based hospital)
- Previous GME required
- Preliminary positions offered
- Information on USMLE Step 2-CS

- Participation in National Resident Matching Program (NRMP); code(s)
- Participation in San Francisco match
- Participation in another matching program
- Number of interviews conducted last year for first year positions
- Required letters of recommendation
- Earliest date for applications; latest date for applications; interview period

Program faculty

- Number of faculty (physician and nonphysician)
- Full-time and part-time physicians and nonphysicians
- Percentage of full-time paid female physician faculty
- Ratio of full-time equivalent paid faculty to positions

Careers in Medicine

Careers in Medicine is a comprehensive, four-phase career planning and development program sponsored by the Association of American Medical Colleges (AAMC). Designed to equip medical students with the skills and information needed to make informed career decisions, it focuses on helping students understand their medical career options, select their specialty, and apply to a residency program that fits their career goals. The program is offered in conjunction with medical school staff, and can also be accessed via the Internet at www.aamc.org/careersinmedicine.

As students work through the program they engage in a process of self-assessment, career exploration, decision-making, and career planning. They can assess their career goals and aspirations online and access their results at any time through their private Personal Profile. Of special interest to students exploring specialty options are the Careers in Medicine Specialty Pages, which provide comprehensive information for 119 specialty and subspecialty areas, including nature of the work, personal characteristics, residency/fellowship training requirements, Match results, workforce statistics, physician compensation, and links to over 1,000 specialty associations, journals, and newsletters.

Careers in Medicine offers guidance and interactive decision-making tools for making these important career decisions. Students can cycle through the program several times during medical school as they develop increasingly more refined views of their preferred career paths. The program is currently available to all AAMC-member US and Canadian medical schools. It is also available to medical students in osteopathic medical schools that have completed licensing agreements with the AAMC. Staffs in medical schools offer workshops using the Careers in Medicine model throughout all 4 years of medical school.

To obtain information about the program and to find out more about accessing the password-protected Web site, students should contact their Careers in Medicine Liaison, or the student affairs dean, in their medical school. Residents should contact the Careers in Medicine Office at careersinmedicine@aamc.org.

Choosing a Medical Specialty

Since 1994, the AMA Medical Student Section has maintained Choosing a Medical Specialty, a bibliography of current sources for information on the medical and surgical specialties for students preparing to enter into the residency selection process. This online publication directs students to numerous resources available to help them make informed career choices.

ERAS

ERAS[®]—the Electronic Residency Application Service, provided by the AAMC—has been working together with applicants, medical schools, and training programs to streamline the application process for 13 years. Using the ERAS service, applicants to residency and fellowship programs transmit applications and supporting documents to training programs over the Internet. Each year, the ERAS system transmits more than 22 million documents, bypassing the laborious paper process and the US Postal Service.

Specialties using ERAS 2009 (residency positions begin July 2009) include:

- Anesthesiology (most positions begin July 2010)
 - Dermatology (most positions begin July 2010)
 - Diagnostic Radiology (positions begin July 2010)
 - Emergency Medicine
 - Family Medicine
 - Family Medicine/Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation combined programs
 - Internal Medicine (preliminary and categorical)
 - Internal Medicine/Dermatology combined programs
 - Internal Medicine/Emergency Medicine combined programs
 - Internal Medicine/Family Medicine combined programs
 - Internal Medicine/Pediatrics combined programs
 - Internal Medicine/Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation combined programs
 - Internal Medicine/Psychiatry combined programs
 - Neurological Surgery*
 - Neurology
 - Nuclear Medicine
 - Obstetrics/Gynecology
 - Orthopaedic Surgery
 - Otolaryngology
 - Pathology
 - Pediatrics
 - Pediatrics/Emergency Medicine combined programs
 - Pediatrics/Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation combined programs
 - Pediatrics/Psychiatry/Child Psychiatry Triple Board programs
 - Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation (most positions begin July 2010)
 - Plastic Surgery Integrated Programs offering PGY1 positions
 - Psychiatry
 - Psychiatry/Neurology
 - Radiation Oncology
 - Surgery (General)
 - Transitional Year
 - Urology
 - Vascular Surgery - Integrated
 - All US Air Force*/Army/Navy programs offering PGY1 positions
- *Specialties debuting in ERAS 2009

Having successfully implemented ERAS in residency specialties, the service focused its attention on offering fellowship applicants and programs the same benefits available to residency participants. ERAS Fellowships, introduced in 2003, offers two cycles for fellowship applications. The July application cycle has fellowship programs receiving applications in July for positions that commence 12 months later. The December application cycle has programs receiving applications in December for positions that begin 18 months later. Fellowship specialties using ERAS 2009 include:

July Application Cycle Specialties

(Apply July 2008; Positions begin July 2009)

- Colon and Rectal Surgery
- Geriatric Medicine (Family Practice and Internal Medicine)
- Pediatric Emergency Medicine (Emergency Medicine and Pediatrics)

December Application Cycle Specialties

(Apply December 2008; Positions begin July 2010)

- Asthma, Allergy and Immunology
- Cardiovascular Disease
- Endocrinology, Diabetes and Metabolism
- Gastroenterology
- Gynecologic Oncology
- Hematology and Oncology
- Infectious Diseases
- Interventional Cardiology
- Maternal-Fetal Medicine*
- Neonatal-Perinatal Medicine
- Nephrology
- Pediatric Gastroenterology
- Pediatric Hematology-Oncology*
- Pediatric Nephrology
- Pediatric Rheumatology
- Pediatric Surgery
- Pulmonary Disease and Critical Care Medicine
- Rheumatology
- Thoracic Surgery
- Vascular Surgery

* Specialties debuting in ERAS 2009

Residency students and graduates of US medical schools should contact the student affairs office at their medical schools of graduation for information about ERAS. Students and graduates of foreign medical schools should contact the Educational Commission for Foreign Medical Graduates (ECFMG). All fellowship applicants, including US and international graduates, should contact the ERAS Fellowships Document Office (EFDO). General information about ERAS, including EFDO contact information and participating programs, is available at www.aamc.org/eras.

Transitioning to Residency: What Medical Students Need to Know

The AMA's Minority Affairs Consortium (MAC) has developed this online resource for medical students transitioning into residency training programs. The information is meant to provide an overview of the planning, application, and selection process from the personal viewpoints of MAC members who have successfully gone through the process themselves.

Sections include the following:

- Getting Ready: Medical School Years 1-3
- The Residency Application: Information & Procedures
- The Application Process: A Timetable for Success
- Writing Your Personal Statement
- Selecting Your Residency Programs
- The Residency Interview: Making the Most of It
- Not Matched? The Decision to Reapply
- Making the Most of Your Residency
- Residency Programs: An Inside Look
- General Residency Questions

The Residency Interview: A Guide for Medical Students

This online resource guide, available to AMA members, is published by the AMA Women Physicians Congress (AMA WPC), a special interest group comprised of physicians and medical students who are advocates for women's health issues and women in medicine professional and life balancing issues.

This resource addresses the following topics:

- Handling gender-based questions
- Couples match
- Shared and part-time residencies
- Preparing for your interview
- Interview questions to ask
- Common and uncommon questions that will be asked of you
- What to bring with you

Both men and women medical students report anxiety and confusion when faced with interviews for residency placement. Women medical students reported that they had difficulty with their residency training interviews when asked questions dealing with gender. Some women reported that they were never asked gender-based questions, but others reported being asked questions about their marriages and plans for childbearing. Men and women respondents alike said they were often asked questions which they found to be vague or provocative.

The interview process is stressful for all medical students, and medical schools seldom coach their students in how to approach residency placement. In publishing this guide, the AMA WPC Governing Council felt that it would meet the needs of all medical students and would include a special section for women on gender-based questions.

This guide is not intended to help students pick a specialty or how to interview specifically in the different specialties, nor does it suggest how to plan electives. Rather, it is an overview of the interviewing process, intended as a guide to start students' thinking about what they will encounter.

Find a Residency or Fellowship

In response to many requests from medical school graduates seeking unfilled positions in residency programs, the AMA Resident and Fellow Section (AMA-RFS) offers a Web-based list of open residency and fellowship positions.

Postings on the "Find a Residency or Fellowship" Web site include a short description of the position and the program, as provided by program officials, as well as contact information. The site also provides links to specialty societies that offer information on residency vacancies.

www.ama-assn.org/ama/pub/category/6920.html

Programs that wish to list a vacant position can enter the required data at www.ama-assn.org/ama/pub/category/6436.html.

For information on positions in a given specialty, applicants for positions may also wish to contact the appropriate specialty society, as shown in Section II.

AMA Alliance Resident Physician Spouses and Medical Student Spouses (RPS-MSS) Groups

The American Medical Association Alliance (Alliance), a nationwide grass roots network of more than 25,000 physician spouses and physicians, is the largest volunteer arm of the AMA. The Alliance offers support and advocacy for the family of medicine, a convenient portal for help when you need it, and the opportunity to make a difference in your community while advancing personal development and leadership skills.

Resident physicians and their spouses (RPS) and medical students and their spouses (MSS) are encouraged to join this resource for “surviving the training years.” Annual membership is only $10.

Special features include scholarship resources, Physicians in Training Host Program for medical students traveling to interview for residency, access to a nationwide network of physician families that help introduce new physicians’ families to their new community, and opportunities to have a voice in legislative issues that affect physicians and health care. Children’s activity books and resources on the medical marriage are also available.

B. Information on Matching Programs

Most US medical students and other applicants to US GME programs secure positions through a “matching program.” The National Resident Matching Program (NRMP) is the largest matching program; other residency matching programs include the San Francisco Matching Program and the matching programs sponsored by the American Urology Association (AUA) and the American Osteopathic Association (AOA). In addition, the various US Armed Services select applicants participating in military programs at US medical schools for Armed Forces-sponsored GME programs. Finally, the Canadian Resident Matching Service (CaRMS) sponsors a two-phased match for Canadian medical school students and other applicants.

National Resident Matching Program

The National Resident Matching Program (NRMP) has been matching the preferences of applicants and programs for residency positions since 1952. The program was created to provide both applicants and residency program directors a fair opportunity to consider their options for appointment, to make reasoned decisions, and to have their decisions announced at a specified time. Participants in the NRMP agree to honor the commitment to offer or to accept an appointment if a match results.

In 2007, in addition to 15,667 US medical students, another 19,308 “independent” applicants competed for 21,845 graduate year one (GY1) positions and 2,840 graduate year two positions offered in the NRMP. Independent applicants include prior graduates of US allopathic medical schools and eligible students/graduates of osteopathic, Canadian, and international medical schools, and Fifth Pathway programs. The numbers of US medical students, independent applicants, and programs participating in the 2007 match increased slightly from the previous year.

Since July 2001, all NRMP services have been Web-based. Participants register for the Match, pay their registration fees, submit rank order lists, and receive match results via the NRMP Web site at www.nrmp.org.

The NRMP is not a centralized application service. Applicants apply through ERAS or directly to residency programs, and the programs administer their own selection process, including requests for interviews. Programs that participate in the NRMP require applicants to register with the NRMP. In January and February, after interviewing has been completed, applicants and programs submit to the NRMP via the Web rank order lists indicating their choices in order of preference. The system is in real time with up-to-the-minute information on applicants and programs participating in the match.

Both applicants and programs must agree that neither will ask the other to make a commitment before Match Day, although a high level of interest may be expressed. Verbal or written contracts prior to Match Day should not be made and are violations of the NRMP Match Participation Agreement signed by all participants. The final preferences of program directors and applicants as reflected on the submitted rank order lists will determine the offering of positions and the placement of applicants.

Through the NRMP process, each applicant and program submits a list of preferences in rank order. The matching algorithm places an applicant into a program he or she prefers that 1) has ranked the applicant and 2) has not been filled with other applicants who also prefer the program and are ranked higher on the program’s list. Match results are announced in mid-March and are available on the NRMP Web site to participants. Applicants who fail to obtain a position and programs that do not fill all their offered positions are informed 2 days before the general announcement so that they may contact one another to secure appointments. The majority of appointments to residency programs begin on or about July 1.

Positions Offered Through the NRMP

The positions offered by programs participating in the NRMP are typically those sought by US medical school seniors; that is, positions that provide the first year of graduate medical education. In addition, specialties that start their training at graduate year two offer positions in the NRMP so that applicants may link their first and second years of training on their rank order lists.

- Categorical positions are offered by programs that expect applicants who enter in graduate year one to continue until completion of training required for specialty certification, provided their performance is satisfactory (normally 3 to 4 years).
- Preliminary positions provide 1 or 2 years of prerequisite training for entry into advanced programs that require 1 or more years of clinical training. Internal medicine, surgery, and transitional year programs commonly offer preliminary positions.
- Advanced positions at graduate year two, which do not commence until a year after the Match, are in specialty programs that require completion of 1 or more years of preliminary training. Applicants without prior graduate medical education may apply for these positions while also applying for preliminary positions that are compatible with their plans.
- Resident positions at graduate year two that begin in July of the year of the match are reserved for physicians who have had prior graduate medical education. These positions are not available to senior US medical students.

Couples and Shared Residency Positions

Applicants who are members of a couple may link their program choices together. In creating pairs of program choices, couples can mix specialties, program types, and geographic locations.

Some programs offer shared residency positions. In a shared residency, two residents share one position, usually alternating months on clinical rotations with time off to devote to family, research, or other interests. Obtaining a shared residency position through the NRMP requires that two applicants who have enrolled separately in the NRMP become partners to be matched together in a single position.

Specialties Matching Service

In addition to conducting the match for graduate year one and graduate year two residency positions, the NRMP conducts matches for advanced residency or fellowship positions through the Specialties Matching Service. These specialty matches occur throughout the year, and each requires its own registration with the NRMP.

Specialty matches currently include the following:

- Combined Musculoskeletal Matching Program (participating subspecialties of orthopaedic surgery)
- Abdominal transplant surgery
- Allergy and immunology
- Child and adolescent psychiatry
- Colon and rectal surgery
- Medical Specialties Matching Program (participating subspecialties of internal medicine)
- Minimally invasive and gastrointestinal surgery
- Neonatal-perinatal medicine
- Obstetrics-Gynecology Fellowship Match (participating subspecialties of obstetrics and gynecology)
- Ophthalmic plastic and reconstructive surgery
- Pediatric cardiology

- Pediatric critical care medicine
- Pediatric emergency medicine
- Pediatric gastroenterology
- Pediatric hematology/oncology
- Pediatric rheumatology
- Pediatric surgery
- Primary care sports medicine
- Radiology (participating subspecialties in radiology)
- Surgical critical care
- Thoracic surgery
- Vascular surgery

Important Dates

- | | |
|-------------|--|
| August 15 | The NRMP Main Residency Match Web site opens for applicant registration. US seniors and independent applicants begin registering for the following year's Match. |
| September 1 | Registration opens for institutions and programs participating in the Main Match. |
| November 30 | Deadline for applicant registration. Registration after November 30 requires an additional $50 late registration fee. |
| January 15 | The submission of rank order lists begins on the Web at www.nrmp.org . |
| February | The ranking process culminates with the closing of rank order lists in the third week of February. |
| March | Applicants and institutions receive the Match results the third week of March. Unmatched applicants are notified at noon on Monday, and unfilled specialty positions are posted to the Web that Tuesday at noon Eastern Standard Time. |
| July 1 | Most appointments to residency programs begin. |

Information and Inquiries

The National Resident Matching Program is sponsored by the Council of Medical Specialty Societies, American Board of Medical Specialties, American Hospital Association, American Medical Association, and Association of American Medical Colleges. The NRMP is managed and operated by the Association of American Medical Colleges.

San Francisco Matching Program

For 2008, the San Francisco Matching Program offers residency positions in specialties that do not participate in the National Resident Matching Program (NRMP), including child neurology, ophthalmology, orthopedic trauma, and plastic surgery. It also offers fellowship positions in several subspecialties, including Mohs micrographic surgery, ophthalmology fellowships, rhinology, pediatric otolaryngology, facial plastic surgery, and craniofacial surgery. Applicants are advised to review carefully the information provided on the San Francisco Match Web site at www.sfmach.org.

Because the San Francisco Match does not offer GY1 positions, applicants must obtain their preliminary positions outside of the San Francisco Match. Some programs have designated preliminary positions in the same institution for applicants who match through the San Francisco Match; therefore, these applicants do not have to go through a matching program to obtain a GY1 position. The programs are not required to be ACGME-accredited to participate in the matching program.

To participate in the San Francisco Match, applicants complete the online registration form, print it, and mail or fax it along with the required payment to the San Francisco Matching Program. Applicants are then e-mailed a registration number, as well as additional information on matching procedures. Most, but not all, of the programs participating in the San Francisco Match use the Central Application Service (CAS); programs in those specialties not using the CAS must be contacted directly for their individual applications. The Central Application can be downloaded and saved to one's personal computer for completion and electronic submission.

The ranking function for the San Francisco Match is completed online for applicants and on paper for programs. Applicants complete the rank form that is posted on the San Francisco Match Web site and submit online. Receipt is confirmed by e-mail. The San Francisco Match uses an "applicant-proposing algorithm," and all matches are tentative until the matching process has been completed, with the outcome determined by the rank order lists submitted by programs and applicants. All matches are binding commitments.

Registration for the San Francisco Match begins in May for ophthalmology and throughout the year for other specialties. The period for submitting rank order lists varies according to specialty. Unfilled positions are posted on the San Francisco Match Web site throughout the year, and all programs participating have access to statistical data not provided to the general public.

Urology Match

The American Urological Association (AUA) sponsors a match for residency positions in urology only. Each year, about 350 applicants compete for approximately 235 positions, virtually all of which are filled through the AUA Match. AUA Match statistics, as well as general information about the AUA matching process, can be found on the AUA Residency Match Web site. Applicants are advised to review this Web site information carefully.

The prerequisite training for a prospective urology resident is 1 or 2 years, preferably in a general surgery program. Because the Urology Match does not offer GY1 positions, applicants obtain their preliminary positions outside of the AUA Match. Some programs have designated preliminary positions in the same institution for applicants who match through the Urology Match; therefore, those applicants do not have to go through a matching program to obtain a GY1 position. Other programs require applicants to participate in the NRMP Main Residency Match to obtain a position for preliminary training. Preliminary positions for US allopathic medical school seniors must be offered through the NRMP Main Residency Match.

The registration form and fee for the AUA Match are submitted using an online form that can be accessed on the AUA Web site. The Web site also lists participating programs and indicates whether each uses ERAS or another method for receipt of applications. It is important to note that registration for the AUA Match does not register an applicant with ERAS, or vice versa.

The AUA Match ranking function is paper-based. Preference lists must be submitted to the AUA Match by the first week in January, and they cannot be changed after the deadline date. A sample preference list form can be printed from the AUA Match Web site, but it must be sent by US Postal Service or fax to the AUA Match office. As with the NRMP, the AUA Match uses an "applicant-proposing algorithm," and the AUA Match outcome is determined by applicants' and programs' preference lists. All matches are binding commitments.

Applicants can register for the AUA Match as early as the spring of the year prior to the AUA Match; the final registration deadline is the first week of January. The period for submitting rank order lists is December through the first week of January, and Match Day is in the third week in January. Vacancies available after the AUA Match may be listed on the phone-in AUA vacancy hotline. Unmatched applicants may make individual arrangements with programs that have vacant positions.

Canadian Resident Matching Service

The Canadian Resident Matching Service (CaRMS) is a two-phased match. The First Iteration Match is open to Canadian medical school seniors and international medical graduates who are Canadian citizens or permanent residents. They compete for approximately 2,600 positions. The Second Iteration Match is open to unmatched Canadian students and applicants with prior North American GME experience.

CaRMS receives directly from the Canadian medical schools a list of current year graduates and automatically sends them a token to access the Applicant Webstation. Independent applicants must complete the online request for registration. Once eligibility has been confirmed by CaRMS, an access token is sent by e-mail. Registration for the First Iteration match opens in August, and the application process continues through the fall. The Applicant Webstation opens for First Iteration Match participants in September, and for those in the Second Iteration Match in January. For the First Iteration Match, the ranking function opens in the beginning of February and closes on February 26, and Match Day is March 5. For the Second Iteration Match, the ranking function opens in early April, and Match Day is in mid-April.

CaRMS also allows couples to link their rank order lists so they will match to programs suited to their needs. The partners enroll individually in the CaRMS Match and indicate in the system that they want to participate as a couple. Both partners of a couple must submit the same number of ranks on their rank order lists. The couple matches to the most preferred pair of programs on the rank order lists where each partner has been offered a position.

Military Matches

Positions in US military residency training programs are open only to applicants who are graduates of the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences (USUHS), medical students with an individual military commitment through the Health Professions Scholarship Programs (HPSP), and participants in the Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC). Although applicants and programs submit rank order lists, and applicants to Army and Navy programs apply through the Electronic Residency Application Service (ERAS) as their civilian counterparts do, only the Army uses a computerized matching process similar to the NRMP matching process to select residents. The Navy and the Air Force employ a scoring board, using applicant and program rank order lists to make their selections. Decisions are made in early December, and results are sent to the NRMP so that applicants who registered for the NRMP Main Residency Match, but who obtained a military residency training position, can be withdrawn from the NRMP. Applicants who have been notified by the military in early December that they are authorized to seek civilian deferred residency training can participate in the NRMP or another appropriate civilian matching program.

Couple's Matching

Some matching programs, including the NRMP and CaRMS, offer the opportunity for two partners to link their rank order lists so that both residency applicants can match to programs suited to their needs. The partners enroll individually in the match and indicate that they want to be in the match as a couple. They form pairs of choices on their rank order lists, which are then considered in rank order in the match. The couple matches to the most preferred pair of programs on the rank order lists for which each partner has been offered a position.

No matching program has access to information from another matching program. Applicants, therefore, should not accept advice to try to find out about another match under the guise of creating a "couple's match," since that attempt would represent a match violation. More specifically, a matching program may advise an applicant that it offers a couple's match when a couple's match is not possible. When two partners participate in different matching programs, they cannot link rank order lists between matches. If one matching program requests that an applicant's partner contact a residency program that participates in another match in order to inquire about the likelihood of matching, the partner is being asked to violate the terms of that match. Almost every match contract prohibits applicants and programs from inquiring about how one plans to rank the other. Consequently, when partners participate in different matches, the only way to ensure that both partners will match to programs in the same geographic region is for the partner participating in the later match to rank only programs in the same geographic area in which the partner in the earlier match obtained a position.

Match Outcomes

1. A Binding Commitment

It is the policy of every matching program that a match between an applicant and a program is a binding commitment. Failure to honor that commitment is a violation of the contract signed during the registration process. Penalties for violations vary among the matches. Some matches permit applicants to seek a waiver of their match commitment, either by mutual agreement of the applicant and program or by contacting the match office directly. The applicable rules are available on each match program's Web site.

2. The "Early Matches"

Applicants participating in some early matches—the San Francisco Match and the AUA Urology Match—receive their match results in January or early February. In some cases, a preliminary position will be "held" by the same institution to which the applicant matched. In other cases, applicants who obtained positions through the early matches will be required to register for the NRMP Main Residency Match to secure a position for their preliminary training. (In all cases, US allopathic medical school seniors must participate in the NRMP for their preliminary positions.)

3. Unmatched "Early Match" Applicants

Applicants who do not match in one of the early matches may seek positions after the match concludes, using the list of available positions that is typically posted on the relevant matching program's Web site.

The San Francisco Matching Program uses a Vacancy Information System that lists vacant post-Match positions, as well as positions that become available throughout the year. Applicants must complete the "Applying to Post Match Vacancies" form that is posted on the San Francisco Match Web site (www.sfmach.org).

The AUA Urology Match posts vacancies in urology on its Web site (www.auanet.org/residents/resmatch.cfm) after the AUA Match concludes and throughout the year. Applicants must contact programs directly.

The NRMP begins to release the results of the Main Residency Match on Monday of Match Week, when applicants are told whether, but not to which programs, they have been matched. At Noon EST on Tuesday of Match Week, when the NRMP releases the list of unfilled programs, "the Scramble" begins. Information about vacant positions is posted to the NRMP R3 System (www.nrmp.org) in a "dynamic" format so that programs can delete positions from the list as they are filled. The list indicates how the program will receive applications: through ERAS or by e-mail or fax. The List of Unfilled Programs remains on the NRMP Web site until May 1.

After May 1, services such as FindAResident (www.aamc.org/findaresident) provide a continuously updated list of residency vacancies.

C. GME Information for IMGs

Entry of Foreign-Born Medical Graduates to the United States

[Note: The following information is provided by Catheryn Cotten, Director, Duke University and Medical Center International Office.]

The entry of foreign-born graduates of non-US medical schools to the United States is governed by the US Immigration and Nationality Act (INA), as amended, which is administered by the US Department of Homeland Security (DHS), the US Department of State (DOS), the US Department of Labor (DOL), and other departments and agencies specified in the Act. It is a violation of federal law to provide employment to a non-US citizen who does not hold employment authorization in the US. Federal law also places special restrictions on the activities, training, and employment of foreign physicians. Residency program directors considering foreign-born international medical graduates (IMGs) should understand and consider these limitations. The most common nonimmigrant classifications that permit training are the exchange visitor (J-1), and the temporary worker (H-1B). Lawful Permanent Resident (LPR or "green card") status permits general work, including a residency, as do certain DHS-issued work permits. Foreign-born IMGs must also hold the Standard Certificate of the Educational Commission for Foreign Medical Graduates for participation in a training program regardless of the immigration classification they may hold.

[Note: The following information is provided by the Educational Commission for Foreign Medical Graduates.]

The Educational Commission for Foreign Medical Graduates (ECFMG®), through its program of certification, assesses the readiness of IMGs to enter US residency or fellowship programs that are accredited by the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education (ACGME). The ECFMG and its organizational members define an IMG as a physician whose basic medical degree or qualification was conferred by a medical school located outside the United States and Canada. To be eligible for ECFMG certification, the physician's medical school and graduation year must be listed in the International Medical Education Directory of the Foundation for Advancement of International Medical Education and Research (FAIMER®). US citizens who have completed their medical education in schools outside the United States and Canada are considered IMGs, while foreign nationals who have graduated from medical schools in the United States and Canada are not. Although not considered IMGs for the purpose of ECFMG certification, foreign nationals who have graduated from medical schools in the United States and Canada are required to obtain a visa that allows for participation in clinical programs of GME.

ECFMG Certification

ECFMG certification provides assurance to ACGME-accredited residency and fellowship program directors and to the people of the United States that IMGs have met minimum standards of eligibility required to enter such programs. ECFMG certification is one of the eligibility requirements to take Step 3 of the United States Medical Licensing Examination (USMLE), and is required to obtain an unrestricted license to practice medicine in the United States. To be certified by ECFMG, applicants must meet medical education credential requirements and examination requirements.

Medical Education Credential Requirements

1. Applicants must have had at least 4 credit years (academic years for which credit has been given toward completion of the medical curriculum) in attendance at a medical school that is listed in the FAIMER International Medical Education Directory (IMED). There are restrictions on credits transferred to the medical school that awards an applicant's medical degree that can be used to meet this requirement. The physician's graduation year must be included in the medical school's IMED listing. (The FAIMER IMED contains information supplied by countries about their medical schools. FAIMER is not an accrediting agency.)

2. Applicants must document the completion of all requirements for, and receipt of, the final medical diploma. ECFMG verifies every applicant's medical diploma with the appropriate officials of the medical school that issued the diploma. When ECFMG sends the medical diploma to the medical school for verification, ECFMG requests that the medical school include the applicant's final medical school transcript when the school returns the verification of the medical diploma to ECFMG. Verification by ECFMG with the issuing school may also be required for transcripts that are submitted by applicants to document transferred academic credits. ECFMG medical education credential requirements are not fulfilled until verification of the final medical diploma, final medical school transcript, and, if required, transfer credit transcript(s) are received directly from the issuing school(s) and accepted by ECFMG.

Examination Requirements

The examination requirements for ECFMG certification include passing Step 1 and Step 2 of the USMLE. The Step 2 exam has two components, the clinical knowledge (CK) component and the clinical skills (CS) component.

To meet the examination requirements for ECFMG certification, applicants must:

1. Satisfy the medical science examination requirement. Step 1 and Step 2 CK of the USMLE are the exams currently administered that satisfy this requirement. To meet the medical science examination requirement for ECFMG certification, applicants must pass both Step 1 and Step 2 CK within a specified period of time. See Time Limit for Completing Examination Requirements, below.

Former Examinations Accepted for ECFMG Certification: The ECFMG also accepts a passing performance on the following former examinations to satisfy the medical science examination requirement for ECFMG certification: ECFMG Examination, Visa Qualifying Examination (VQE), Foreign Medical Graduate Examination in the Medical Sciences (FMGEMS), and Part I and Part II Examinations of the National Board of Medical Examiners (NBME). Additionally, the ECFMG accepts, for the purpose of its certification, a score of 75 or higher on each of the 3 days of a single administration of the former Federation Licensing Examination (FLEX), if taken prior to June 1985.

Certain combinations of examinations are also acceptable. Applicants who have passed only part of the former VQE, FMGEMS, or the NBME Part I or Part II may combine a passing performance on the basic medical science component of one of these examinations or USMLE Step 1 with a passing performance on the clinical science component of one of the other examinations or USMLE Step 2 CK, provided that the components are passed within the period specified for the examination program. While these examination combinations are accepted by the ECFMG for its certification, applicants should be aware that after December 31, 1999, use of portions of FLEX or portions of the Part examination sequence of the NBME to fulfill the eligibility requirements for USMLE Step 3 is no longer accepted. Additionally, although the ECFMG Examination and FLEX, if taken prior to June 1985, satisfy the medical science examination requirement for ECFMG certification, they have not been recognized by the US Secretary of Health and Human Services as meeting the medical science examination requirement to obtain a visa to enter the United States (see below).

2. Satisfy the clinical skills requirement. Step 2 CS of the USMLE is the exam currently administered that satisfies the clinical skills requirement for ECFMG certification. Specific time limits for passing Step 2 CS for ECFMG certification may apply. See Time Limit for Completing Examination Requirements.

Former Examinations Accepted for ECFMG Certification: Applicants who have both passed the former ECFMG Clinical Skills Assessment (CSA®) and achieved a score acceptable to ECFMG on an English language proficiency test (such as the Test of English as a Foreign Language [TOEFL] exam or the former ECFMG English Test) can use these passing performances to satisfy the clinical skills requirement.

Time Limit for Completing Examination Requirements

[Note: These policies apply only to ECFMG certification. The USMLE program recommends to state medical licensing authorities that they require applicants to pass the full USMLE sequence (including Step 3, which is not required for ECFMG certification) within a 7-year period. The USMLE program also recommends to state medical licensing authorities a limit on the number of attempts allowed to pass each Step or Step Component. (Refer to Time Limit and Number of Attempts Allowed to Complete All Steps and Retakes in the USMLE Bulletin of Information.) Additionally, applicants who retake a previously passed Step or Step Component to comply with a time limit should understand the implications for Step 3 eligibility of a failing attempt on a retake. (Refer to Official Performance of Record for Examinees Retaking a Previously Passed Step in the USMLE Bulletin of Information for more information.) Applicants should also contact the Federation of State Medical Boards for general information and the medical licensing authority of the jurisdiction where they plan to apply for licensure for definitive information, since licensure requirements vary among jurisdictions.]

ECFMG policy requires that applicants pass those USMLE Steps or Step Components required for ECFMG certification within a 7-year period. Once an applicant passes a Step or Step Component, the applicant will have 7 years to pass the other Step(s) or Step Component(s) required for ECFMG certification. This 7-year period begins on the exam date for the first Step or Step Component passed and ends exactly 7 years from this exam date. If an applicant does not pass all required Steps and Step Components within a maximum of 7 years, the applicant's earliest USMLE passing performance will no longer be valid for ECFMG certification.

This 7-year limit does not apply to the former ECFMG CSA, because the CSA was not a USMLE Step or Step Component. Applicants who satisfied the clinical skills requirement for ECFMG certification by passing the CSA are required to pass only Step 1 and Step 2 CK within a 7-year period for ECFMG certification. For these applicants, the 7-year period begins on the date the first USMLE Step or Step Component is taken and passed, regardless of when the CSA was passed.

On June 14, 2004, USMLE Step 2 CS became a requirement for ECFMG certification, replacing the ECFMG CSA as the exam that satisfies the clinical skills requirement. As part of the USMLE, Step 2 CS may be subject to the 7-year time limit for ECFMG certification as described below.

Earliest USMLE Passing Performance Before June 14, 2004

If an applicant's earliest USMLE passing performance that is valid for ECFMG certification took place before June 14, 2004, the applicant is required to pass only Step 1 and Step 2 CK within a 7-year period for ECFMG certification; if required for ECFMG certification, Step 2 CS can be passed outside the 7-year period.

Earliest USMLE Passing Performance on or After June 14, 2004

If an applicant's earliest USMLE passing performance that is valid for ECFMG certification took place on or after June 14, 2004, the applicant is required to pass Step 1, Step 2 CK, and, if required for ECFMG certification, Step 2 CS within a 7-year period for ECFMG certification.

Standard ECFMG Certificate

The Standard ECFMG Certificate is issued to applicants who fulfill the medical education credential requirements, meet the examination requirements, and clear their financial accounts with the ECFMG. The Standard ECFMG Certificate may be used for entry into accredited GME programs in the United States.

Validity of Examinations for Entry Into Graduate Medical Education

[Note: The following discussion of validity and expiration of examinations, and the "valid through" and "valid indefinitely" designations on the Standard ECFMG Certificate (if applicable), are relevant only for the purpose of entry into US GME programs. They do not pertain to eligibility for USMLE Step 3 or to any time limits imposed by medical licensing authorities or other entities for the completion of all USMLE Steps.]

Clinical Skills Examinations: For applicants who satisfy the clinical skills requirement for ECFMG certification by passing Step 2 CS, this passing performance is not subject to expiration for the purpose of entering GME programs.

For applicants who satisfied the clinical skills requirement for ECFMG certification by passing the former ECFMG CSA and an English language proficiency test, passing performance on the CSA may be subject to expiration for the purpose of entering GME programs, as described below.

Passing performances on CSA administrations that took place before June 14, 2001, are valid for 3 years from the date passed for the purpose of entering GME programs. The date through which passing performance on the CSA remains valid for entry into GME (the CSA "valid through" date) will be listed on the applicant's Standard ECFMG Certificate. If the applicant entered a program before expiration of the valid through date, the applicant may request permanent validation. This means that the CSA date is no longer subject to expiration. To request permanent validation, the applicant and an authorized official of the training institution must complete a Request for Permanent Validation (Form 246). On receipt of this form, ECFMG will provide a permanent validation sticker to be affixed to the certificate. If an applicant who passed CSA before June 14, 2001, did not enter a GME program within 3 years of the CSA pass date, the applicant's CSA passing performance has expired for the purpose of entering GME. Before entering a program, these applicants must pass Step 2 CS. Passing performance on Step 2 CS does not expire for the purpose of entry into GME.

Passing performances on CSA administrations that took place on or after June 14, 2001, are not subject to expiration for the purpose of entering GME programs. Applicants who are certified by ECFMG and whose Standard ECFMG Certificate lists a "valid through" date for an administration of the CSA that took place on or after June 14, 2001 may contact ECFMG for a permanent validation sticker.

English Examinations: Passing performances on the English language proficiency test formerly required by ECFMG, regardless of the date passed, are not subject to expiration for the purpose of entering GME programs. Applicants who are certified by ECFMG and whose Standard ECFMG Certificate lists a "valid through" date for an English language proficiency test may contact ECFMG for a permanent validation sticker.

Visas (Immigration Status or Classifications) That Permit Graduate Medical Education or Training

[Note: The following information is provided by Catheryn Cotten, Director, Duke University and Medical Center International Office.]

Three primary factors control whether IMGs may engage in clinical training in the United States:

1. Educational preparation. The physician must meet the usual education, examination, and certification requirements described in the ACGME's Essentials of Accredited Residencies in Graduate Medical Education for admission to a GME program.
2. State law requirements. The physician must meet state licensure requirements for the intended training in the intended venue.
3. Federal employment laws and regulations. The physician must hold visa documentation that not only meets federal requirements for employment in general, but that also permits employment as a physician trainee.

In all cases of clinical training, the physician must meet the educational and licensure requirements (items 1 and 2). This section discusses the variations possible to meet the federal employment requirements (item 3).

The J-1 Exchange Visitor Program and ECFMG Sponsorship

The J-1 is a common visa class used by foreign national physicians who enter the United States to pursue programs of graduate medical education (GME) or training. The J-1 Exchange Visitor Program is administered by the US Department of State-Exchange Visitor Program (DOS-EVP) in accordance with the Code of Federal Regulations, 22 CFR Part 62. The objectives of the Exchange Visitor Program are to enhance international exchange and to promote mutual understanding between the people of the United States and other nations through the interchange of persons, knowledge, and skills. The DOS-EVP designates various US educational institutions and training organizations to serve as J-1 exchange visitor program sponsors. Each J-1 designation is designed for a specific educational purpose and may include authorization to sponsor foreign nationals in categories such as "professor," "research scholar," "short-term scholar," "student," or "alien physician."

The DOS-EVP has designated ECFMG as the only organization authorized to sponsor foreign national physicians in J-1 status in the "alien physician" category. Physicians who enter the United States in J-1 status to participate in clinical programs of graduate medical education or training must do so in the "alien physician" category under ECFMG sponsorship. According to federal regulations, a program of graduate medical education or training may include a medical specialty, a directly related medical subspecialty, or both [INA 101(a)(15)(j), INA 212(j), 22 CFR 62.27].

Foreign national physicians seeking ECFMG sponsorship as J-1 exchange visitors for enrollment in programs of graduate medical education or training in the United States must meet, among other requirements, a number of general requirements, which are detailed in the ECFMG's application materials for J-1 visa sponsorship. At a minimum, applicants must:

- Have passed USMLE Step 1 and Step 2 CK and CS; or the former VQE, NBME Part I and Part II, or FMGEMS; or an acceptable combination thereof, as specified by ECFMG

- Hold a Standard ECFMG Certificate without expired examination dates, if applicable [Note: See Validity of Examinations for Entry into Graduate Medical Education, above, for important information.]
- Hold a contract or an official letter of offer for a position in a program of graduate medical education or training that is affiliated with a medical school
- Provide a Statement of Need from the Ministry of Health of the country of most recent legal permanent residence (LPR), regardless of country of citizenship. This statement provides written assurance that the country needs physicians trained in the proposed specialty and/or subspecialty. It also serves to confirm the applicant physician's commitment to return to that country upon completion of training in the United States, as required by §212(e) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, as amended.

ECFMG facilitates the visa sponsorship of physicians through the coordinated efforts of training institutions and the foreign national physicians. The host institution is responsible for providing the J-1 physician with the approved clinical training. Each host institution designates an individual to serve as the Training Program Liaison (TPL). The TPL cooperates with ECFMG by providing administrative oversight and ensuring regulatory compliance. Communication regarding all aspects of ECFMG sponsorship must be channeled through the TPL.

The US Government requires that all J program sponsors, including ECFMG, process visa sponsorship for J-1 exchange visitors and J-2 dependents through the Student and Exchange Visitor Information System (SEVIS). SEVIS is a national, Web-based monitoring system designed to assist educational institutions and government agencies in managing student and exchange visitor data. As the designated visa sponsor for J-1 physicians, ECFMG is required to interface directly with SEVIS. Host institutions/TPLs must communicate with ECFMG regarding arrival and any change in program activity for the ECFMG-sponsored physicians. GME programs do not have access to SEVIS for physician trainee sponsorship purposes.

Upon establishing an applicant's eligibility, ECFMG creates or updates the SEVIS record and issues Form DS-2019, Certificate of Eligibility for Exchange Visitor (J-1) Status. Issuance of Form DS-2019 indicates that the physician is eligible to apply for the J-1 visa. The DS-2019 is one of many factors considered by the US Government in determining visa eligibility. Policies and procedures vary and are subject to change. J-1 physicians are responsible for complying with all US laws and regulations pertaining to foreign nationals.

Issuance of DS-2019 reflects an approved application for training in a specific program. It is not transferable for participation in any other activity, program, or institution. J-1 sponsorship requires full time participation and progression in an approved training program. J-1 sponsorship is dependent on a valid GME contract, which is generally renewed on an annual basis.

Federal Regulations That Govern Exchange Visitor Physicians and Their Activities

Physicians who obtain J-1 status for the purpose of graduate medical education or training are obligated to comply with associated regulations. Following is a review of specific federal regulations governing the J-1 "alien physician" category. See 22 CFR 62.27 for complete regulations.

Duration of Participation

The duration of participation for exchange visitors in GME is the "time typically required" to complete the program. This generally refers to the minimum number of training years required by an ABMS member board for specialty or subspecialty certification and/or the accredited length of training as defined by the ACGME. Duration is further limited to 7 years, provided that the J-1 physician is advancing in an approved program of graduate medical education or training. The J-1 visa, however, does not entitle J-1 physicians to 7 years of sponsorship. J-1 physicians are encouraged to consult with ECFMG regarding proposed educational pathways and sponsorship eligibility; GME programs should also contact the ECFMG directly to determine whether a particular training period can be sponsored completely in J-1 status. The director of the DOS-EVP may consider an extension beyond 7 years based on a documented exceptional need in an exchange visitor's home country.

Two-Year Home Country Physical Presence Requirement

In accordance with Section 212(e) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, as amended, all J-1 exchange visitors who are sponsored by ECFMG for the purpose of graduate medical education or training (and all accompanying J-2 dependents) are automatically obligated to return to their country of last legal permanent residence for an aggregate of at least 2 years. At the initiation of J-1 sponsorship, J-1 applicants declare their country of last legal permanent residence and submit the corresponding Statement of Need, thereby committing themselves to return to that country. The 212(e) obligation may not be fulfilled in a different country. An individual must fulfill (or obtain a waiver of) this obligation before being eligible for an H, temporary worker visa; an L, intra-company transferee visa; an immigrant visa; or adjustment of status to US Lawful Permanent Resident (LPR or "green card").

Change of J-1 Category

Each J-1 category defines the foreign national's educational objective in coming to the US. The categories most often used by foreign national physicians are "research scholar," "professor," "short-term scholar," "student," and "alien physician." Exchange Visitors may not, as a matter of course, change from one J-1 category to another. In rare cases, ECFMG petitions the DOS to request a change of J category. The regulations limit consideration to cases that clearly demonstrate that the proposed change in category is consistent with and closely related to the participant's original exchange objective and necessary due to unusual or exceptional circumstances. [22CFR§62.41(a)]

Training Authorization/Employment

Federal regulations prohibit work, training, and/or financial compensation for activities that are outside of the approved exchange visitor program. In accredited programs of graduate medical education, the program curriculum is established by the ACGME. The J-1 physician "... who engages in unauthorized employment shall be deemed to be in violation of his or her program status and is subject to termination as a participant in an exchange visitor program" (22CFR 62.16). Furthermore, US employers who hire unauthorized foreign nationals are subject to penalties.

Change of Specialty

The Regulations state that "...the alien physician may once, and not later than 2 years after the date the alien physician enters the US as an Exchange Visitor (or acquires exchange visitor status), change his/her designated program of graduate medical education or training..." [22CFR 62.27(f)]. Once an Exchange Visitor enters the third year of sponsorship, a change of specialty is no longer permitted.

The Exchange Visitor Sponsorship Program is administered by ECFMG in accordance with the provisions set forth in a Memorandum of Understanding between ECFMG and the DOS-EVP and the federal regulations established to implement the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act. ECFMG is responsible to ensure that J-1 physicians and host institutions meet the federal requirements for participation. Temporary Worker H-1B

The H-1B visa is for temporary workers in specialty occupations who hold professional-level degrees (bachelor's degree minimum) appropriate to the employment in which they will be engaged. Between 1976 and 1991, graduates of foreign medical schools were not permitted to use the H-1B for residencies, except in cases where individuals were of national or international renown. The Immigration Act of 1990, and subsequent technical amendments, made the H-1B available to graduates of foreign medical schools who have passed FLEX or the equivalent, have passed an English language exam, and hold a license appropriate to the activity. The Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) has determined that USMLE Steps 1, 2, and 3 or the former NBME Parts I, II, and III are equivalent to FLEX for this purpose. The HHS regulation does not permit combinations of the USMLE and NBME for H-1B purposes; only the full series of one type of exam meets the H-1B requirement. For example, a physician who has passed Part I of the NBME and Steps 2 and 3 of the USMLE has not met the exam requirements for the H-1B because the types of exams differ. Individual states determine the level of licensure required for each level of clinical activity. For example, many states offer a limited or training license for residency training, and that limited or training license meets the licensure requirement for the H-1B.

The federal FLEX or equivalent examination requirement, coupled with the requirement in most states that physicians complete a certain amount of US training prior to admission to the third or final portion of the licensure exam, creates a difficult examination hurdle and limits the number of physicians who can qualify for and use the H-1B visa for clinical training. Note, however, that state licensing authorities set their own rules for administration of Step 3 of the USMLE. Some states permit IMGs to sit for the exam prior to receiving US training, but withhold full licensure until the IMG has completed training. For the purpose of meeting the examination requirement for the H-1B, the IMG may sit for Step 3 in any state, not necessarily the state in which he/she intends to train. In short, a physician may sit for Step 3 in state "X" and use that exam to meet the H-1B requirement for training in state "Y."

Some individuals and organizations believe that the J-1 visa is the only appropriate temporary visa for the purpose of graduate medical education and that programs should never use the H-1B. They cite the purpose of the J-1 (exchange visitor) classification, to provide foreign nationals with opportunities to participate in educational and cultural programs in the United States, as the basis for that belief. This is a matter of philosophy, not law. Any training program may, for its own reasons, elect to file or refrain from filing H-1B petitions for trainees. For their own reasons or at the request of the trainee, some GME programs will sponsor H-1B status, and others will not. The law subjects programs neither to prohibition nor obligation in this regard.

During the training years from July 1997 through June 2000, the annual statutory limit or "cap" on the number of H-1B approvals the US Government could issue each year made it difficult or impossible for trainees to get H-1B approval early enough to begin programs on time. Confronting this uncertainty and the disruption it caused in training and patient care, many GME programs that had previously offered the H-1B option changed their policies and declined to offer the H-1B. In October 2000, Congress passed an immigration law that exempts universities and their related and affiliated nonprofit institutions from the numerical limitations that affect business and for-profit entities. Many training programs, by virtue of this university affiliation, can now claim exemption from the numerical limits and may, therefore, use the H-1B with the reliability and certainty experienced prior to the operation of the cap. Note that some programs operating independently may not be sufficiently affiliated with an educational institution to qualify for exemption from the cap.

H-1B employment authorization is employer-specific. The GME program must file an H-1B petition on behalf of the IMG; the law does not permit prospective trainees to file H-1B petitions for themselves. Therefore, the GME programs control the use of the H-1B. An H-1B petition approval for a particular program may be used only for that program and is not transferable to another institution or program. Each new institution/employer must file a new petition. The total amount of continuous time permitted in H classification is 6 years. Time spent outside the US (eg, a month of vacation or a week at a conference) may be “reclaimed” and added to the 6 years to extend calendar time beyond 6 years. Extension beyond 6 years is permitted in certain special circumstances where documents for lawful permanent residence have been filed and have been pending for an extended period. This circumstance would be rare with trainees. Program directors should consult with their institutions’ immigration experts or legal counsel before relying on, anticipating, or assuming an exceptional extension. An absence from the United States of 1 year or more restarts the 6-year period. For programs that include research years, allowing the trainee to spend a year abroad engaged in collaborative research could restart the 6 years of the H-1B.

The H-1B also requires that the IMG pass an English language exam. The English exam associated with obtaining ECFMG certification normally meets that requirement.

There are some exceptions and special circumstances regarding the examination requirements for the H-1B. Graduates of LCME-accredited US medical schools are exempt from the FLEX (or equivalent) and English language examination requirements. Graduates of LCME-accredited Canadian medical schools are exempt from the English language exam, but not the FLEX (or equivalent) exam. Interestingly, full licensure in Canada based on Canadian examinations, which may be reciprocal for full licensure in a US state, is not equivalent to FLEX for H-1B purposes. The FLEX, or its equivalent (currently the USMLE Steps 1, 2, and 3), is still required even if these physicians hold full licensure in the state in which training will occur. Physicians of national or international renown are exempt from the special examination requirements for the H-1B, but must meet the usual examination and certification requirements described in the ACGME’s Essentials of Accredited Residencies in Graduate Medical Education for admission to a GME program and must meet licensure requirements for the intended training. Certain physicians admitted to subspecialty or upper-level GME programs may have an established reputation at the specialty level and may qualify for the national or international renown exemption.

GME program directors may wish to consider the key elements that differentiate the H-1B from J-1 under ECFMG sponsorship for GME training purposes:

- Processing methods and times. The ECFMG J-1 was specifically designed to facilitate GME training. (Note: The ECFMG does not process J-1 applications but rather J-1 sponsorship applications. In addition, the ECFMG issues the DS-2019, not the J-1 visa.) The ECFMG reserves 6 weeks to process a completed J-1 sponsorship application. The H-1B was designed to permit temporary employment in a number of professional areas. A petition must be filed with and approved by DHS for a physician to obtain H-1B status. The combined Department of Labor (DOL) and DHS processes can take 12-16 weeks or longer for approval of the H-1B petition.

For an additional Premium Processing Service (PPS) fee of $1,000, DHS will do its adjudication in 15 calendar days. PPS cannot speed up the DOL part of the process.

- Examination requirements. The documentation for the J-1 requires that the physician pass the USMLE, Steps 1 and 2 (or an equivalent exam). The documentation for the H-1B requires that the physician pass the USMLE, Steps 1, 2, and 3 (or an equivalent exam). Certain exceptions exist for H-1B visa purposes for physicians of national or international renown.
- Maximum duration. The J-1 has a maximum 7-year limit, provided the training is accredited or otherwise approved by DOS-EVP. The H-1B has a 6-year limit, but a break of 1 year can restart the 6-year clock.
- Nonstandard or very specialized programs. The DOS-EVP limits and controls the type and duration of programs and activities that ECFMG is permitted to sponsor. Longer programs that contain a research component or those doing training in new or unique procedures and techniques may be outside the range of sponsorship for the J-1. The H-1B relates to the general activities of the physician, not to the length of training required by the board or whether the training is accredited. Therefore, the H-1B can be used for extended or specialized programs that DOS-EVP does not permit ECFMG to sponsor on the J-1.
- Funding sources. The J-1 is designed for exchange. Funding can come from a variety of sources in addition to or instead of the training stipend. Sources might include government funds, funds from the hospital or employer in the home country, foreign or US grants from public or private sources, or personal funds. The H-1B is an employment-based classification. The funding must come from the US employer in the form of salary compensation, and it must meet a minimum wage level under DOL regulations.
- Two-year home country requirement. The J-1 subjects the physician to the 2-year home country physical presence requirement [INA 212(e) and 22 CFR 41.63]. The H-1B has no such requirement, thus making the H-1B an attractive alternative for those trainees who might be prospective faculty upon completion of training.
- Spouse/dependent employment. The J-2 spouse or child of a J-1 can apply to DHS for work permission. The H-4 spouse or child of an H-1B is not permitted to work while in H-4 status.

F-1 Student Optional Practical Training

The DHS may authorize students in F-1 status to engage in optional practical training (OPT) for up to 12 months after completion of studies, provided the appointment can be completed in 12 months. This OPT authorization is appropriate for the first or matched year, which is a 1-year contract. IMGs who receive US medical degrees while in F-1 status may apply to the DHS for OPT work authorization. If the DHS grants employment authorization, the individual may use that authorization for residency education for a period of 12 months. The F-1 “Designated School Official” (DSO) at the US medical school can usually provide information necessary to make employment eligibility determinations for these graduates. Note that graduation from a US PhD program does not permit OPT in graduate medical education, even though the student may hold a medical degree. The PhD prepares one for research but not for clinical practice, and the OPT must relate directly to the immediate past US degree, not to a prior degree. Program directors and physicians who plan to use the F-1 OPT for training should pay close attention to the dates of the OPT. Often these dates do not match the training program dates exactly. The student should work closely with the DSO and the program director to ensure that the OPT can cover the first full year of training. If the OPT expires before the end of the training year, the physician may not be able to complete the training year. At the end of the OPT period, the physician must acquire a different status, such as J-1 under ECFMG or H-1B, to continue training in the US.

J-1 Student Academic Training

Those who graduate from a US medical school in the J-1 “student” category are eligible for up to 36 months of Academic Training (AT) related to the field of study. These students may use their AT time for residency training. The J-1 exchange visitor program “Responsible Officer” (RO) at the medical school may authorize this work permission; it does not require DHS approval. Note that graduation from a US PhD program does not permit AT in graduate medical education, even though the student may hold a medical degree. The PhD prepares one for research but not for clinical practice, and the AT must relate directly to the immediate past US degree, not to a prior degree. Program directors and physicians who plan to use the J-1 AT for training should pay close attention to the dates of the AT. The student and RO have some flexibility as to the starting and ending dates of employment authorization within the regulatory parameters of the program. The student should work closely with the RO and the program director to ensure that the AT can cover the training appointment period. At the end of the AT period, the physician must acquire a different status, such as J-1 under ECFMG or H-1B, to continue training in the US.

Persons of Extraordinary Ability O-1

The O-1 is for persons of extraordinary ability as demonstrated by sustained national or international acclaim. Although rare at the GME level, it is possible and not unknown. In medicine most often this is someone who, as the definition indicates, has an established and exceptional reputation in a particular field based on original research or in development of specialized techniques for patient care. These physicians come into or remain in GME programs to apply their research clinically or to enhance or improve their techniques by acquiring related skills.

For J-1 physicians at or near the end of the J-1 time limits, the O-1 may provide an avenue for continuing education beyond those limits. An important characteristic of the O-1 is that the J-1 2-year home country physical presence requirement does not prevent one from obtaining O-1 status. That requirement’s restrictions apply only to obtaining H, L, and immigrant visas. For example, one can depart from the United States as a J-1 and return almost immediately as an O-1, provided an appropriate O-1 petition has been approved by DHS and an O-1 visa obtained at a post abroad. (See “J-1 Exchange Visitor Program and ECFMG Sponsorship” for information on the 2-year home country physical residence requirement.) Obtaining the O-1 does not waive the home country physical residence requirement of the J-1 Exchange Visitor status. Regardless of how long one remains in the United States in O-1 status, the requirement continues to attach to the physician’s immigration status until the physician returns home for the requisite 2 years or obtains a waiver of that requirement. Nothing in the O-1 status ameliorates the prohibition against H, L, or permanent resident status.

As with the H-1B, the training program must file the O-1 petition with the DHS for a particular GME program at a particular location. The physician may work only for the employer who filed the petition in the capacity described in the petition. Unlike the H-1B, no special examination requirements apply to the O-1, other than those necessary for licensure at the appropriate level to perform the duties attendant to the position and described in the petition.

Employment Authorization From the Department of Homeland Security (DHS)

Immigration law empowers the DHS to grant employment authorization to certain nonimmigrants or intending immigrants. Such authorization is usually temporary and may have terms or conditions.

Frequently, academic institutions sponsor professors, teachers, researchers, and students in J-1 status. J-2 dependents, the spouse or children of a J-1 exchange visitor, may apply to the DHS for work authorization. DHS generally grants that permission, provided the J-2 does not need to work to support the principal J-1. When granted, J-2 work authorization permits general employment, including residency training. Program directors should take special note that this employment authorization depends absolutely upon the J-1 exchange visitor maintaining status. If the J-1 leaves the United States or fails to maintain status, the J-2 work authorization ends, even though the spouse or child may hold a J-2 employment authorization document that appears to be valid. Extension of the J-2 work permission requires a new application to and approval from DHS. If the J-1 experiences delays in his/her extension, those delays cascade into delay of extension of status and of work permission for the J-2. The J-2 may have breaks in employment authorization due to these timing issues.

Other classifications or circumstances under which the DHS may grant work authorization include, but are not limited to, G-4 dependent of a foreign government employee in the United States, temporary protected status, voluntary departure, refugee, asylee, or certain lawful permanent resident applicants. Most employment authorization in these classifications permits general employment, including clinical training, but employers must evaluate the work authorization documents case by case.

In almost all cases the work authorization has a specific beginning and ending date, and work outside those dates is not permitted. The alien must apply for extension in a timely way to ensure continuous, unbroken work permission. If the current authorization expires and the DHS has not yet granted the extension authorization and issued the extension document, then the alien may have to stop work and wait for the extension approval. Unbroken continuation of work permission depends on the basis upon which DHS granted employment authorization initially and whether the alien files a timely application for extension. This characteristic of discontinuity of the employment authorization can cause serious interruptions in training if the alien fails to file for extension in a timely way or if documents are lost or delayed in DHS processing.

Occasionally, the DHS issues a blanket declaration that employers may consider some expired employment authorization documents to be valid for a period of time beyond the expiration date on the face of the document. This happens most often with those persons who have been granted humanitarian safe haven in the United States for a limited period of time through a number of different legal avenues. Prospective employers must evaluate these situations case-by-case.

Lawful Permanent Resident (LPR, Immigrant or “Green Card”) Status

Persons who hold lawful permanent resident (LPR) or “green card” status are permitted to remain in the United States permanently and to accept any employment.

Foreign-born IMGs may immigrate to the United States based on a relationship to a US citizen or lawful permanent resident, or based on employment and skills. In general, the rules for immigration are the same for IMGs as for any other immigrant, but special rules apply to physicians who immigrate based on their intention and ability to practice the profession of medicine, including practice at the residency level. Employment-based immigration based on a job offer for the practice of medicine requires that the physician pass the NBME Parts I and II examinations or the equivalent, as determined by the Secretary of the US Department of Health and Human Services. These are the same examinations needed for ECFMG sponsorship for clinical training and are included among the examinations accepted for ECFMG certification described earlier. Certain examination exceptions apply to physicians who are of national or international renown.

Nonclinical Observation, Consultation, Teaching, and Research

Foreign national physicians who wish to enter the United States in J-1 status for research and nonclinical training may do so in programs involving observation, consultation, teaching, or research that involve “no patient care” or “incidental patient contact” related to one or more of these activities.

DOS has authorized ECFMG to sponsor foreign national physicians for this purpose under the J-1 “research scholar” category. Foreign national physicians applying for ECFMG sponsorship as J-1 research scholars must meet the requirements specified by ECFMG for that nonclinical sponsorship.

The DOS-EVP also authorizes universities and other health science institutions to sponsor foreign national physicians for these purposes in the categories of “professor,” “research scholar,” and “short-term scholar,” provided they will engage in activities that involve “no patient care” or only “incidental patient contact” as defined in the regulations. The “incidental patient contact” option allows physicians to be in clinical areas, but in no way permits clinical training or patient care. Physicians applying for sponsorship by a university or other similar institution should contact that program directly for specific requirements and procedures.

If physicians undertake these nonclinical activities in the “professor or research scholar” category, two important limitations apply.

- Limited Prior J Status. To begin such a program they must not have been physically present in the United States in J-1 or J-2 nonimmigrant status for more than 6 months during the 12-month period immediately preceding the new program start date [22 CFR 62.20(d)]
- Bar to Clinical Training. After completing a nonclinical program, they must wait 12 months before being eligible for ECFMG J-1 sponsorship for clinical training. [EVP Policy Statement. Federal Register 6-29-1999, pages 34982-34983.]

Exchange visitors in programs involving observation, consultation, teaching, or research may remain in the United States for a maximum of 5 years, with no extension beyond that time.

Physicians engaging in nonclinical research with no patient care may also use the H-1B. The H-1B for nonclinical activities does not require medical knowledge exams such as USMLE and generally should not require a medical license, as no patient care is involved.

Fifth Pathway Program

American Students in Foreign Medical Schools: The AMA's "Fifth Pathway" Statement

Adopted June 12, 1971 and modified May 23, 1973; March 22, 1975; September 7, 1979; June 11, 1981; March 2, 2001; November 30, 2001; and June 17, 2005.

1. A pathway for entrance to approved GME programs, other than those existing under previous policies, became available as of July 1, 1971, for students who have fulfilled the following conditions:
 - a. Have completed, in an accredited American college or university, undergraduate premedical work of the quality acceptable for matriculation in an accredited United States medical school, evaluated by measures such as college grade point average and scores on the Medical College Admission Test.
 - b. Have studied medicine at a medical school located outside the United States, Puerto Rico, and Canada that is listed in the International Medical Education Directory, published by the Foundation for Advancement of International Medical Education and Research; see www.ecfm.org for more information.
 - c. Have completed all of the formal requirements for a diploma of the foreign medical school except internship and/or social service. Those who have completed all of the formal graduation requirements, including internship and/or social service, and are, consequently, eligible to apply for ECFMG certification, are not eligible for the Fifth Pathway.
2. Students who have completed the academic curriculum at a foreign medical school and who have fulfilled the above conditions may be offered the opportunity to substitute an academic year of supervised clinical training for the internship/social service required by the foreign medical school. The supervised training should consist of the clinical education provided in the third year of a US medical school or in appropriate clinical subinternships. The supervised clinical training must be provided by faculty of a program in medical education accredited by the Liaison Committee on Medical Education and should be conducted in its affiliated hospitals, so as to assure that individuals who complete Fifth Pathway programs are reasonably comparable to the school's regularly graduated students. The medical school should ensure that resources are adequate for the conduct of the Fifth Pathway program, without jeopardizing its other academic programs. Fifth Pathway education should be provided only with the written approval of the dean or other appropriate official of the medical school.

3. Students must pass Step 1 of the United States Medical Licensing Examination (USMLE) in order to be eligible for admission to a Fifth Pathway program.
4. Students must successfully complete clinical training, on the judgment of the medical school's faculty based on a final evaluation comparable to that used to judge regularly-enrolled students. With the approval of the faculty, and upon passing Step 2 of the USMLE, Fifth Pathway students are eligible to enter the first year of approved graduate medical education, without completing the social service and/or internship required by the foreign country and without obtaining ECFMG certification.
5. Fifth Pathway certificates must be provided only with the approval of the dean or other medical school official and must be recorded with the registrar. The medical school must notify the American Medical Association that a student has successfully completed the Fifth Pathway program.
6. The Council on Medical Education recommends that all state medical licensing boards consider for licensure all candidates who have successfully completed a Fifth Pathway program on the same basis as they consider candidates who have received ECFMG certification.

Fifth Pathway Requirements and Availability

At present, Fifth Pathway graduates must pass Step 1 and Step 2 Clinical Knowledge (Step 2 CK) as well as Step 2 Clinical Skills (Step 2 CS) of the USMLE for participation in the NRMP Matching Program.

Currently, three medical schools offer the Fifth Pathway in the United States:

- New York Medical College, Valhalla, New York. For more information, call 914 594-4490.
- Ponce Medical School, Puerto Rico; 787 844-3710.
- Mount Sinai School of Medicine of New York University, New York; 718 334-3268. Program began accepting Fifth Pathway students in July 2007.

Fifth Pathway Web Site

The AMA has a Web site on the Fifth Pathway that answers many questions about the program, including:

- What is a Pathway?
- What is the Fifth Pathway?
- Who can qualify for a Fifth Pathway?
- How are Fifth Pathway students different from International Medical Graduates?
- How can I verify a physician's Fifth Pathway credentials?
- Current programs

The Fifth Pathway to Residency Education: A Brief History

At the AMA annual meeting in July 1971, the AMA Council on Medical Education adopted a policy, "A New Pathway for Entrance to AMA Approved Internship and Residency Programs." This policy established a new route, or pathway, to residency training for graduates of foreign medical schools. This route came to be called the Fifth Pathway, a name adopted because there were already four pathways to residency education: transfer to and graduation from a US medical school, ECFMG certification, full and unrestricted licensure by a US licensing jurisdiction, and passing the Spanish language licensing examination in Puerto Rico.

The new AMA policy resolved a controversy surrounding access to residency and practice for a group of US citizens who had studied medicine in Mexico but were unable to meet all the requirements for certification by the ECFMG. Medical education in Mexico, then and now, includes a period of internship and government social service after a student has completed the academic requirements of a medical school. Many of the US citizens who had completed the medical school academic requirements were not successful in finding internship appointments and, consequently, could not be provided with a final diploma, required for ECFMG certification. These students and their parents believed that since they had completed the required 4 years of medical school education, they were being unfairly deprived of entry to residency training and practice in the United States.

The Fifth Pathway program got under way almost immediately after the Council policy statement was issued, with five Fifth Pathway clerkship programs under way by early 1972. Eventually, 43 medical schools in 26 states and in three Canadian provinces offered the Fifth Pathway clerkship. The numerical peak of the Fifth Pathway was in 1980, when 546 Fifth Pathway physicians completed medical school.

The number of US medical schools providing the clerkship declined over the years: By 1991, only the University of California, Irvine, Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York, and New York Medical College in Valhalla offered the clerkship. As of 2007, New York Medical College, Ponce Medical School, and Mount Sinai School of Medicine of New York University offer the Fifth Pathway program.

By far the largest number of Fifth Pathway physicians have come from the Autonomous University of Guadalajara. Most of the other Fifth Pathway graduates are also from Mexican medical schools or from other Latin American schools. Fifth Pathway physicians are involved in every aspect of medical practice, that is, in direct patient care and medical teaching, administration, and research. They are also spread throughout the major medical specialties and a number of subspecialties, such as neonatal perinatal medicine, sports medicine, and addiction psychiatry, although they are not well represented in the preventive medicine specialties. The largest number of Fifth Pathway physicians practice in New York, California, and New Jersey.

The AMA has maintained a list of the US medical schools that have provided Fifth Pathway clerkships, as well as a list of physicians who have completed Fifth Pathway education at those schools, and Fifth Pathway information is included in the AMA Masterfile. As of June 30, 2009, through action of the AMA Council on Medical Education (CME Report 1-I-07, available at: www.ama-assn.org/ama/pub/category/18155.html), the Fifth Pathway will be discontinued. The Council will no longer support the Fifth Pathway as a mechanism for eligibility to enter the first year of ACGME-accredited graduate medical education programs. The AMA will continue to maintain record of former graduates of Fifth Pathway programs, but will cease to add records of individuals completing a year of supervised clinical education at an LCME-accredited medical school in the US after July 1, 2009, although entrants beginning in January 2009 will be included.

AMA International Medical Graduates Section

The International Medical Graduates Section (IMG) of the AMA advocates for IMG physicians by enhancing their participation in organized medicine, increasing AMA communication and interchange among IMGs, and studying issues of concern to IMGs such as the impact of IMGs on the physician workforce. An IMG member of the AMA is automatically a member of the IMG Section and can participate in the Section's annual elections and Caucus activities. The IMG Section is dedicated to improving opportunities for IMGs in the areas of licensure, training, and practicing medicine in the US.

The IMG Section Web site contains information of interest to IMGs, including:

AMA Council on Medical Education

Recognizing the relationship between quality medical education and quality health care, the AMA established the Council on Medical Education in 1904 to formulate and implement policy. After studying and evaluating medical education across the continuum, the current Council recommends educational policies and standards to the AMA House of Delegates (HOD) and to the medical education community. The council also prepares numerous reports responding to AMA HOD actions and initiates relevant studies in areas of high concern to the educational community. For example, recent initiatives have focused on:

- The need for workforce policy that supports an adequate continuing supply of well-qualified physicians to meet the medical needs of the public
- Medical student debt and its possible influence on the decision to apply to medical school and on the career choices of graduates
- Resident working conditions, duty hours and the impact of sleep deprivation and fatigue on medical student and resident education and patient safety

The council also reviews and recommends nominees to the AMA Board of Trustees for appointment or nomination to accrediting bodies, specialty-certifying boards and other national organizations.

Key Dates in the History of the Council on Medical Education and GME

- 1847 American Medical Association organized; Committee on Medical Education appointed
- 1901 First publication of the Annual Medical Education issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association

AMA Section on Medical Schools

The AMA Section on Medical Schools (AMA-SMS) provides all LCME- and AOA-accredited medical schools and their faculty an opportunity both to express their opinions through debate and to participate in the formulation of policy through a vote in the AMA House of Delegates. During each Annual and Interim meeting, the AMA-SMS provides informative educational programs on current issues of relevance to the medical education community. Uniquely positioned to address key education and practice issues affecting physicians and their patients, the AMA-SMS plays an important role in helping the AMA develop policy in areas such as medical education reform, clinical research, workforce planning, patient care, and the financing of medical education.

AMA Medical Education Group

The AMA Medical Education Group, under the guidance of the Council on Medical Education and the Section on Medical Schools, supports the development, promulgation, and implementation of policies that fulfill the profession's responsibility to ensure the competence of its members.

The group facilitates the development of national medical education policy, collects survey data, and widely disseminates information on undergraduate, graduate, and continuing medical education as well as educational programs in 71 health-related professions. The group serves as a valuable resource for physicians, educators, policymakers, researchers, and the public.

National GME Census

The National GME Census is a joint effort of the AMA and the Association of American Medical Colleges (AAMC) and replaces the AMA Annual Survey of GME Programs. Every summer, all programs accredited by the ACGME and combined specialty programs approved by their respective boards are asked to complete this online census, available at www.aamc.org/gmetrack.

The census collects data on program characteristics, such as program size, work hours, program evaluation, educational characteristics, and health benefits. GME program directors also confirm or edit information about individual residents and provide information on new residents, if necessary. These data are stored in the AMA Physician Masterfile and are used to verify the education and training credentials of physicians. Program data are used to update listings in FREIDA Online and Appendix A of the Graduate Medical Education Directory.

During the 2007 survey cycle, 90% of programs completed the census as of January 31, 2008, either online via the AAMC Web site or by completing a paper survey.

Medical Education Issue of JAMA

Every September, the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA) publishes a special issue on medical education.

The GME tables in the appendix are based on data collected through the National GME Census. Program directors, specialty societies, and health workforce researchers and planners at national and state levels all rely on the data published in this issue of JAMA. The contributions of program directors to the Census are very important to the provision of accurate and timely data to the GME community. Program directors' early and complete participation in the Census is thus strongly encouraged and appreciated; without the information they provide, such reporting on GME data would be difficult, if not impossible.

The September 5, 2007 issue included:

D. AMA Medical Education Products, Services, and Activities

- Mortality Among Hospitalized Medicare Beneficiaries in the First 2 Years Following ACGME Resident Duty Hour Reform
- Mortality Among Patients in VA Hospitals in the First 2 Years Following ACGME Resident Duty Hour Reform
- Physician Scores on a National Clinical Skills Examination as Predictors of Complaints to Medical Regulatory Authorities
- Association Between Funding and Quality of Published Medical Education Research
- Medicine Residents' Understanding of the Biostatistics and Results in the Medical Literature
- Effectiveness of Teaching Quality Improvement to Clinicians: A Systematic Review
- Trends in Study Methods Used in Undergraduate Medical Education Research, 1969-2007

Medical Education Data Service, Mailing Labels

The AMA Medical Education Data Service provides published information, existing tables, custom tables, electronic data and mailing labels to students, educational institutions, professional associations, government agencies, foundations and others interested in collecting, analyzing and disseminating medical education data. Written requests for data are screened for merit and must include the purpose of the project, specific data service requested, expected due date for data, and name, address, phone and fax number of the project contact. When requests require staff contribution or organizational overhead, a fee is assessed; program directors requesting data receive a substantial discount.

Electronic State-level GME Data

The AMA offers aggregate statistics for each state on all resident physicians, in Adobe Acrobat format. There are six different tables for each state, including Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia, as well as a set of six tables for the United States:

- Total Number of Resident Physicians and Program Year 1 Resident Physicians in GME Programs
- Resident Physicians by Type of Medical School Attended
- Resident Physicians by Gender and Race/Ethnicity
- Resident Physicians Without Prior US GME in GY1 Positions by Type of Medical School Attended
- Resident Physicians Who Completed a Graduate Medical Education Program or Completed a Preliminary Year
- Plans of Resident Physicians Completing a Program

GME e-Letter

The GME e-Letter, a free monthly e-mail newsletter from the AMA, is a popular source of news and information for the GME community. Comments from subscribers include:

- "Clear, concise, and relevant!"
- "Very useful since it is focused, brief and contains information of importance to program directors."
- "Loved the e-letter. Thought it was well-written, informative and appropriately succinct."
- "A great resource and the best way to share cutting-edge news re: GME."

Since its debut in May 2001, the GME e-Letter has grown to encompass more than 13,000 subscribers, including:

- Program directors and staff of residency and fellowship programs
- Hospital administrators
- Professional associations
- Certifying/licensing boards
- Physician recruiters
- Governmental and regulatory organizations

The e-Letter covers a wide range of issues affecting GME—everything from resident work hours and pharmaceutical industry access to residency programs to updates on accreditation activities and development of new subspecialties. The publication also references peer-reviewed studies and articles in the medical literature that are related to GME.

GME Articles from American Medical News

American Medical News (AMNews) is a weekly newspaper for physicians, published by the AMA, that covers professional, educational, social, economic, and policy issues in medicine. AMNews frequently covers key issues in medical education; recent articles, for example, include:

- California medical schools tailor programs for diverse populations
- Personality can guide specialty choice
- Proposed law would rework residency spending to increase primary care
- Student loan deferment program restored — for now

- Lack of supervision add to resident errors, study finds
- Record number vied for 2007-08 medical school slots
- We have more students. Now what?
- More residents, more subspecialization
- Online open house may be a first in recruiting residents
- First for-profit med school nears approval

Medical Education Bulletin

The Medical Education Bulletin is a newsletter published twice a year by the AMA Medical Education Group. It covers issues of interest to the undergraduate and graduate medical education community, including updates on AMA actions related to medical education at the annual and interim meetings of the AMA House of Delegates.

Recent issues have included such articles as:

- AMA House of Delegates Actions, 2007 Annual Meeting
- Innovative strategies for transforming the education of physicians
- National Disaster Life Support Education Consortium
- Coalition for Physician Enhancement

The Bulletin is mailed to GME program directors, medical education directors at teaching hospitals, members of the Section on Medical Schools, medical school deans, and the AMA appointees to the Residency Review Committees.

Guidebook for GME Directors and Coordinators

Published by the AMA Division of Graduate Medical Education, this 70-page guidebook provides residency/fellowship program directors, program coordinators, institution officials, and others information about AMA services, products, and activities related to GME. Also included are descriptions of and contact information for a number of organizations involved in GME, including American Board of Medical Specialties (ABMS) certification boards and medical licensing boards.

The book is available as an Adobe Acrobat pdf file at www.ama-assn.org/go/gmguidebook.

AMA Introduction to the Practice of Medicine Educational Series

The AMA is offering the Introduction to the Practice of Medicine (IPM) program, a Web-based educational series developed through collaboration with the Ohio State Medical Association and The Ohio State University Medical Center. The series is designed to help meet the dual challenges of educating residents in ACGME general competency requirements and supplementing their education in a variety of nontraditional curricular topics. IPM features include:

- 24/7 accessibility, so residents can complete the modules and post-assessments at their own convenience.
- Easy navigation, with quick and easy access to learning modules, assessments, reports and a host of other features.
- Comprehensive library of more than 20 learning modules, assembled by experts from across the country, covering such topics as Health Care Quality, Physician Employment Contracts, and Sleep Deprivation, with more modules under construction. Each module includes a formal lecture, post-assessment, evaluation, and course certificate of completion.
- Extensive reporting features, making it simple to track and document progress. The IPM features easy-to-use tools for GME departments to seamlessly track how their institution—and residents—are using the program. Reports can be produced to show which residents have completed each module and how they scored on each post-assessment. Administrators can view aggregate evaluation scores to measure performance at the resident, program, and institution level. These documentation capabilities can present a real-time picture of an institution's overall progress toward fulfilling competency requirements.

AMA Continuing Medical Education

Advances in biomedical science and changes in the other facets of the US health care delivery environment engage physicians in a continuous process of professional development. To ensure that they provide patients with the most current and appropriate treatment, services, and information, physicians keep learning through participation in a wide array of conferences and other teaching experiences, as well as through independent study of published materials. The AMA supports these physician efforts by:

- Administering the only nonspecialty-specific credit system that recognizes physician completion of continuing medical education (CME) activities
- Offering CME publications and programs (both conferences and enduring materials, such as monographs and course materials)
- Establishing new learning modalities (performance improvement and Internet point of care) appropriate for physician professional development and investigating international opportunities for reciprocal CME relationships

The AMA Physician's Recognition Award

In 1968, the AMA House of Delegates established the AMA Physician's Recognition Award (PRA) to both encourage physicians to participate in CME and acknowledge when individual physicians complete CME activities. Activities that meet education standards established by the AMA can be designated AMA PRA Category 1 Credit™ by educational institutions accredited by the Accreditation

Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME) or a recognized state medical society to provide CME to physicians. These typically include state medical societies, medical specialty societies, medical schools, and hospitals. Other activities, usually independent or physician directed learning, may be reported for AMA PRA Category 2 Credit™. AMA PRA certificates are awarded in lengths of 1, 2, or 3 years.

The AMA also offers the AMA PRA with Commendation, awarded to physicians who exceed the credit required to earn the regular PRA. For more information, visit www.ama-assn.org/go/prc.

Through reciprocity arrangements, the AMA will also award the AMA PRA certificate if the CME requirements of a number of specialty organizations are met. In addition, 42 states accept the AMA PRA certificate or the AMA-approved AMA PRA application as evidence that physicians have met the CME requirements for license reregistration.

The AMA sends information about applying for the AMA PRA to physicians who have had a valid AMA PRA certificate within the past 3 years and physicians whose current certificate is expiring within 3 months.

AMA PRA Rules for Performance Improvement and Internet Point of Care (PoC) CME

In 2004, the AMA Council on Medical Education approved new rules governing how Performance Improvement (PI) activities could be conducted for AMA PRA Category 1 Credit. Performance improvement activities describe structured, long-term processes by which a physician or group of physicians can learn about specific performance measures, retrospectively assess their practice, apply these measures prospectively over a useful interval, and reevaluate their performance. The AMA helped the ACCME develop guidance for providers on how to implement the requirements for this format to develop effective PI activities.

Similarly, in 2005, the Council approved new rules governing how Internet PoC activities could be conducted for AMA PRA Category 1 Credit. Internet PoC CME describes a process developed by accredited CME providers that provides structured, self-directed, online learning by physicians on topics relevant to their clinical practice. Learning for this activity is driven by a reflective process in which physicians must document their clinical question, the sources consulted, and the application to practice for the accredited CME provider. The AMA also assisted the ACCME in developing guidance for providers on how to implement the requirements for this format.

For more information on either of these two new formats, visit www.ama-assn.org/go/prbooklet.

AMA CME Program

As an ACCME-accredited provider, the AMA offers CME activities in a variety of formats for physicians' professional development. All activities must be congruent with the mission of the AMA and are planned and implemented to meet AMA's rigorous CME standards.

Enduring CME activities

The AMA offers a number of enduring CME activities that provide physician self-assessment. Available in print, CD-ROM, and Internet formats, these enduring CME activities are intended to provide physicians with clinical and nonclinical information that will meet their professional development needs.

A list of activities is available at www.ama-cme.org, or e-mail cmeorders@ama-assn.org for more information.

Journal CME

The AMA offers online journal CME activities in the Journal of the American Medical Association and the six AMA Archives journals. Physicians can earn AMA PRA Category 1 Credit by reading the designated articles online and completing a post-test.

AMA-sponsored conferences and live events

The AMA sponsors multiple conferences and live events designated for AMA PRA Category 1 Credit. Physicians receive education on topics of interest to all disciplines and specialties. Recently, AMA-sponsored conferences and live events have included Basic and Advanced Disaster Life Support programs, the AMA Medical Communications and Health Reporting Conference, and the Women Physician Leaders Summit.

International CME

The International Conference Recognition Program began in 1990 by an act of the AMA House of Delegates. The AMA recognized that international congresses present opportunities for physicians to participate in quality educational programs and provide opportunities for US physicians to collaborate with colleagues overseas. The AMA recognizes a small number of events each year and provides American physicians with an opportunity to earn AMA PRA Category 1 Credit at these approved events. For more information, visit www.ama-assn.org/go/internationalcme.

Gifts to Physicians from Industry

Starting in 2001, the AMA led this initiative to create awareness among physicians and physicians-in-training about the ethical implications of receiving gifts from industry.

The initiative consists of a series of four free online educational modules available at www.ama-assn.org/go/ethicalgifts. Each module presents important general concepts, then uses gifts as the context to illustrate the idea. Every module is rich with case examples. The educational modules will also help satisfy the requirements from the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education (ACGME) for education on professionalism as one of the six competencies expected of residents in training.

The four educational modules cover these topics:

- An overview of ethical, professional, and legal issues for physicians' relationships with industry

- Physicians' expectations from industry and sales personnel
- Professionalism, including the issues of gifts to physicians from industry
- The AMA guidelines on gifts to physicians from industry
Using the Internet, each module is available in two formats at no cost and with 24-hour access:
- Downloadable resource materials for instructors, at any level of medical education, to use to build 1-hour learning experiences. Materials include a presenter's guide, PowerPoint slides, and a participant's handout. CME providers can adapt these resources for use in their local sites.
- Online self-study modules designed for individual learners, designated for AMA PRA Category 1 Credit.

The material in the educational modules is based on the 1990 AMA Council on Ethical and Judicial Affairs (CEJA) Opinion 8.061, "Gifts to Physicians from Industry," which is part of the AMA Code of Medical Ethics. There are no new policies or guidelines in the modules.

The modules also refer to the Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America (PhRMA) guidelines, as well as those developed by other medical, industry, and government groups, as appropriate, to give a broad-based understanding of the issues involved in the ethics of gift giving. The PhRMA code and others are very similar in spirit and substance to the AMA Ethical Opinion. The recent guidance to pharmaceutical and device companies by the Office of the Inspector General is provided as a reference.

Virtual Mentor

Virtual Mentor is the AMA's online ethics journal. Published since 1999, Virtual Mentor (VM) explores the ethical issues and challenges that students, residents, and other physicians are likely to confront in their training and daily practice. For this reason, the journal is a valuable teaching resource for medical educators at all levels as well as for doctors and doctors-to-be. Each monthly issue of VM contains original articles and commentary on a given theme—eg, access to care, quality of life considerations in clinical decisionmaking, public roles of physicians, ethical issues in endocrinology, conflict of values in the clinic.

Virtual Mentor is student- and resident-driven. Theme issue editors are selected each year through a competitive process from among medical students and residents who seek to broaden and deepen their education by taking the time to examine medicine's ever-increasing ethical challenges. The issue editors meet annually with VM editorial staff, based in Chicago, where we discuss potential topics for the upcoming year. Each editor identifies a theme and month of publication for his or her issue and then solicits articles and case commentary from experienced physicians and other ex-

E. GME-related Organizations

Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education (ACGME)

The Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education (ACGME) is a separately incorporated organization, responsible for the accreditation of more than 8,500 allopathic graduate medical education programs. It has five member organizations:

- American Board of Medical Specialties
- American Hospital Association
- American Medical Association
- Association of American Medical Colleges
- Council of Medical Specialty Societies

Each member organization nominates four individuals to the ACGME's Board of Directors. In addition, the Board of Directors includes three public representatives, two resident representatives, and the chair of the Council of Review Committee Chairs. A representative for the federal government also serves on the Board in a non-voting capacity.

The mission of the ACGME is to improve health care by assessing and advancing the quality of resident physicians' education through accreditation. The ACGME's vision is exemplary accreditation and its values are:

- Accountability through processes and results that are open and transparent; responsive to the educational community and the health care community; and reliable, valid, and consistent.
- Excellence through accreditation that is efficient and effective, outcomes-based, improvement-oriented, and innovative.
- Professionalism through actions that are respectful and collaborative, responsive, ethical, and fair.

Under the aegis of the ACGME, the accreditation of graduate medical education programs and the institutions that sponsor them is carried out by 27 residency review committees and an institutional review committee. These committees have been delegated accreditation authority by the ACGME. A Residency Review Committee (RRC) consists of representatives appointed by the American Medical Association, the appropriate specialty board, and, in some cases, a national specialty organization (see table on p. 25).

The Transitional Year Review Committee is composed of ten members who are appointed by the chair of the ACGME in conjunction with the Executive Committee. The term "review committee" is used to denote a Residency Review Committee, the Transitional Year Review Committee, and the Institutional Review Committee. The Institutional Review Committee (IRC) is composed of ten members appointed by the Chair of the ACGME in conjunction with the Executive Committee. The Institutional Review Committee assumes the responsibility for accrediting institutions which sponsor multiple programs. It evaluates institutions for substantial compliance with the Institutional Requirements.

GME programs are accredited when they are judged to be in substantial compliance with the institutional, common, and specialty program requirements. The requirements are developed and periodically revised by a review committee for its area(s) of competence, and are approved by the ACGME. The activities of the ACGME extend to programs and institutions within the jurisdiction of the United States of America.

ACGME institutional and program requirements are posted on the ACGME Web site: www.acgme.org. The institutional and program requirements describe curricular content for GME programs and may also address program resources and personnel, program length and other issues. Accredited programs and institutions are judged to be in substantial compliance with ACGME institutional, common, and specialty-specific program requirements.

Also available on the ACGME Web site are the ACGME Policies and Procedures, Bylaws, and Glossary. The Policies and Procedures provides information on the review process, definitions of accreditation statuses, and other useful information.

A list of programs accredited by the ACGME, including detailed information about each program, is published by the AMA annually in the Directory (see Section III) using information provided by the ACGME. The ACGME lists accredited programs and institutions on its Web site: www.acgme.org. Click on "Search Programs/Institutions" in the left-hand navigation bar to look up the accreditation status of a program or institution. In addition, the Web site contains comprehensive information about accreditation of graduate medical education programs and sponsoring institutions.

ACGME Program Requirements Additions/Updates in 2007

The ACGME Board of Directors meets three times a year, in February, June, and September. One of its functions is to approve revisions to existing ACGME program requirements or the development of program requirements for new specialties/subspecialties.

At its February 2007 meeting, the ACGME approved the following program requirements, effective July 1, 2007, unless noted:

- Common Program Requirements
- Institutional Requirements
- Allergy and Immunology
- Subspecialties of Emergency Medicine
- Pediatric Emergency Medicine (Pediatrics and Emergency Medicine)
- Dermatology
- Pathology
- Medical Genetics
- Molecular Genetic Pathology
- Medical Biochemical Genetics (new subspecialty)
- Diagnostic Radiology (effective July 1, 2008)
- Neuroradiology

At its June meeting, the ACGME approved major revisions, with modifications, to four sets of program requirements, effective January 1, 2008:

- Obstetrics and Gynecology
- Surgery
- Thoracic Surgery
- Endovascular Surgical Neuroradiology

At its September 2007 meeting, the ACGME approved revisions to the following sets of program requirements, effective July 1, 2008, unless noted:

- Orthopaedic surgery subspecialties
 - Adult Reconstructive Surgery
 - Foot and Ankle Surgery
 - Hand Surgery
 - Musculoskeletal Oncology
 - Pediatric Orthopaedic Surgery
 - Spinal Surgery
 - Sports Medicine
 - Trauma
 - Otolaryngology subspecialties
 - Neurotology
 - Pediatric Otolaryngology
- (Minor revisions, effective November 9, 2007)

Association of American Medical Colleges (AAMC)

The Association of American Medical Colleges (AAMC), founded in 1876, is a nonprofit association representing all 126 LCME-accredited US medical schools and 17 accredited Canadian medical schools; some 400 major teaching hospitals and health systems, including 68 Department of Veterans Affairs medical centers; and nearly 100 academic and scientific societies. Through these institutions and organizations, the AAMC represents 109,000 faculty members, 67,000 medical students, and 104,000 resident physicians. The AAMC seeks to improve the nation's health by enhancing the effectiveness of academic medicine. The AAMC assists academic medicine's institutions, organizations, and individuals in the three main mission areas of medical education, medical research, and patient care.

In GME, the AAMC represents and supports members in improving educational quality, strengthening institutional GME leadership and institutional accountability for GME, developing faculty, and setting a national agenda for the support of GME. It carries out this work through a variety of activities.

Compact Between Resident Physicians and Their Teachers

www.aamc.org/meded/residentcompact

Contact: Nicole Buckley

E-mail: nbuckley@aamc.org

The Compact is a declaration of the fundamental principles of GME and the major commitments of both residents and faculty to the educational process, to each other, and to the patients they serve. The Compact's purpose is to provide institutional GME sponsors, program directors, and residents with a model statement that will foster more open communication, clarify expectations, and re-energize the commitment to the primary educational mission of training tomorrow's doctors.

Medical Education Initiatives

www.aamc.org/meded/iime

Contact: Carol A. Aschenbrener, MD

E-mail: caschenbrener@aamc.org

The AAMC has a number of programs and initiatives aimed at improving the health of Americans by fostering innovations in medical education to better align the knowledge, skills, and professionalism of medical students, residents, and practicing physicians with the needs and expectations of the public. Employing expert panels, convening special topic colloquia, and collaborating with external funding partners to administer school-based curriculum improvement grants, the AAMC strives to highlight creative and dynamic approaches employed by medical educators to develop enriching learning experiences and teaching models.

This free online resource enables faculty to publish, share, and discover peer-reviewed educational materials. It is designed to promote collaboration and educational scholarship by facilitating the exchange of peer-reviewed teaching resources such as animations, tutorials, lab manuals, assessment instruments, faculty development materials, and computer-based resources, including an inventory of virtual patients. The AAMC and the McGill University Faculty of Medicine have also announced a new collaboration between MedEdPORTAL and the McGill Molson Medical Informatics (MMMI) project. Through this collaboration, MedEdPORTAL will serve as the primary outlet for more than 8,000 MMMI multimedia teaching materials, helping significantly expand the existing collection of free, high-quality MedEdPORTAL publications currently available online. Recently, MedEdPORTAL has added user comment functionality to promote interactivity and has launched free online training workshops that have reached participants across the globe. In Spring 2008, MedEdPORTAL launched a new Web site, including an online repository, to host online its entire collection of peer-reviewed, high-quality published resources online covering the continuum of medical education.

Project Medical Education (PME)

Contact: Sallyann Bergh

E-mail: sbergh@aamc.org

Project Medical Education (PME) helps educate policymakers and others about the missions of medical schools and teaching hospitals. During visits to medical schools and teaching hospitals, policymakers assume the roles of medical students, resident physicians, and faculty physicians in a 1- to 2-day program that shows them first-hand how medical education benefits all Americans. More than 600 legislators and staff members have participated in at least one PME program held in conjunction with over 60 AAMC member institutions in 24 states since the program's inception in 1999.

The mission of the AAMC's Organization of Resident Representatives (ORR) is to improve resident physician education and training, and the quality of health care, by providing a venue for resident voices and offering leadership development to resident physicians pursuing careers in academic medicine. ORR members are appointed through the AAMC Council of Academic Societies, representing program directors or department chairs.

Group on Education Affairs (GEA)

 Contact: M. Brownell (Brownie) Anderson
 E-mail: mbanderson@aamc.org

The group's purpose is to promote excellence in the education of physicians throughout their professional lives and, thereby, to contribute to improving the health of the public. Reflecting the continuum of medical education, the GEA is organized by four sections, including the Graduate Medical Education Section, which focuses on supporting the development and continued improvement of GME programs. The Research in Medical Education (RIME) Conference, held in conjunction with the AAMC Annual Meeting, includes research papers, symposia, and abstract sessions. The Innovations in Medical Education Exhibits (IME) also are held during the Annual Meeting.

Group on Resident Affairs (GRA)

 Contact: Sunny Yoder
 E-mail: syoder@aamc.org

This group's purpose is to develop leaders who provide GME oversight, administration, organization, financing, and quality in their respective medical schools, teaching hospitals and health systems, and academic societies. The Group offers a GME Leadership Development Course that explores the range of responsibilities from leading a sponsoring institution successfully through an accreditation review to improving the quality of GME, advocating for and managing institutional resources for GME, and developing advanced leadership skills.

Other AAMC Activities

The AAMC also helps students make career decisions and enter residency programs. It assists residents in managing their medical education loans. In collaboration with the AMA, it tracks residents from entry to residency through completion and beyond. The AAMC also offers GME-related online publications.

The Visiting Student Application Service (VSAS) is a new centralized application service for senior clinical electives piloting in 2008-09. The goal is to streamline what is currently a time-consuming and cumbersome process of locating and applying to away electives. Ten schools will pilot VSAS starting in March 2008 and the service is expected to be open to all schools in spring 2009.

ERAS[®]—the Electronic Resident Application Service—works with applicants, designated dean's offices, and training programs to streamline the residency and fellowship application process for all involved. ERAS users transmit application materials and supporting credentials to training programs using the Internet. ERAS serves almost 39,000 applicants, 168 medical schools and designated dean's offices, and just over 5,500 training programs annually (see listing under "Residency Application and Career Planning Resources" for more information).

This resident/fellow database and tracking system was developed to assist GME administrators and program directors in the collection and management of GME data. GME Track contains the National GME Census, which is jointly conducted by the AAMC and the AMA and includes both the Program and Resident/Fellow surveys. The Program survey collects detailed information on residency program characteristics and is primarily used to update FREIDA Online. The Resident/Fellow survey collects demographic, educational, and training information on each resident/fellow and is used to create national GME statistics. All data collected in the National GME Census are available to programs and medical schools to view, print, and download.

 Contact: Edward Salsberg
 E-mail: esalsberg@aamc.org

In light of the need to increase medical school and GME capacity to meet the needs of the nation in 2015 and beyond, the Center for Workforce Studies works to:

- Develop the capacity to effectively document and study physician workforce issues related to physician supply, demand, utilization, and distribution across specialty and geographic region
- Support informed decision-making by the medical education community (medical schools, teaching hospitals, faculty, medical students and residents) and policy makers
- Support AAMC policy goals that related to physician workforce, such as increasing underrepresented minorities in medicine

Association for Hospital Medical Education (AHME)

The Association for Hospital Medical Education (AHME), founded in 1956, is a national, nonprofit professional organization involved in the continuum of hospital-based medical education—undergraduate, graduate, and continuing medical education. AHME's more than 600 members represent hundreds of teaching hospitals, academic medical centers, and consortia nationwide.

The mission of AHME is to:

- Promote improvement in medical education to meet health care needs
- Serve as a forum and resource for medical education information
- Develop professionals in the field of medical education
- Advocate the value of medical education in health care

AHME offers training and current information for medical education professionals; mentoring and training from national experts on GME institutional administration; and collaboration with accreditation, regulatory, governmental, and other professional organizations in medical education.

AHME celebrated its 50th anniversary in Chicago, Illinois, in May 2006. To commemorate this occasion, AHME published the "50th Anniversary Celebration: 1956-2006" book to describe AHME's history of service and honor AHME's leaders, friends, and supporters.

Organization of Program Directors Associations (OPDA)

The Organization of Program Directors Associations (OPDA), a component group of the Council of Medical Specialty Societies (CMSS), works to promote the role of the residency director and residency program director societies in achieving excellence in GME.

Created in 2000, OPDA is a leadership consortium of residency program director (or chair) societies in each of the 27 medical and surgical specialties that correspond to 27 ACGME Residency Review Committees. Consisting of one liaison representative from each program director society, OPDA meets regularly to provide peer interaction, information sharing, and collaborative problem solving. In addition, OPDA sponsors periodic symposia and meetings on timely GME issues, provides a forum for communication with leaders in GME, and monitors and promotes GME excellence in the activities of the AAMC, ACGME, NRMP, NBME, ECFMG, and other organizations that regulate and impact GME.

Recently, OPDA was invited to appoint representatives to two key organizations in medical education (ie, the NRMP and the ACGME) to represent OPDA and program director interests in matters of relevance to GME.

The following societies of program directors (or chairs) are currently represented on OPDA:

Training Administrators of Graduate Medical Education (TAGME)

The National Board for Certification of Training Administrators of Graduate Medical Education (TAGME) programs was created in 2003 to establish standards for the profession, acknowledge the expertise needed to successfully manage GME programs, and recognize those training program administrators who have achieved competence in all fields related to their profession.

Criteria for Certification

- Years of on-the-job experience: at least 3 continuous years in the same clinical specialty
- National meeting attendance: at least one GME-related meeting within the past 3 years
- Site visit/internal review: participation in at least one site visit or internal review within the past 3 years
- Personal professional development within the past 3 years:
 - Oral/poster presentations
 - Abstracts and/or publications
 - Participation and/or leadership in national organizations within the profession
 - Participation and/or leadership in sponsoring institutional/GME committees
 - Departmental presentations, such as orientation or in-service training sessions on program procedures for attendings and/or residents
- Successful completion of the Assessment Tools

Criteria for Recertification

- Five years between certification periods
- National meeting attendance: at least two GME-related meetings within the 5-year period
- Institution/Department Committee participation: at least one committee per year
- Personal professional development activities (3 activities within the 5-year period)
- Oral or poster presentations

E. GME-related Organizations

- GME-related workshop attendance
- Abstracts and/or publications
- Committee leadership
- Participation on a national or regional level committee
- Continued education coursework to enhance professional development (eg, online professional education modules, such as SoftSkills or institutional-based learning courses)
- Higher education coursework
- Successful completion of the Maintenance of Certification Tool

Professional Description

An allergist-immunologist is trained in evaluation, physical and laboratory diagnosis, and management of disorders involving the immune system. Selected examples of such conditions include asthma, anaphylaxis, rhinitis, eczema, and adverse reactions to drugs, foods, and insect stings as well as immune deficiency diseases (both acquired and congenital), defects in host defense, and problems related to autoimmune disease, organ transplantation or malignancies of the immune system. As our understanding of the immune system develops, the scope of this specialty is widening.

Training programs are available at some medical centers to provide individuals with expertise in both allergy/immunology and adult rheumatology, or in both allergy/immunology and pediatric pulmonology. Such individuals are candidates for dual certification.

Source: American Board of Medical Specialties, Guide to Physician Specialties

A certified specialist in allergy and immunology is a physician who previously has passed the certification examination of the American Board of Internal Medicine (ABIM) and/or the American Board of Pediatrics (ABP) with additional certification by the American Board of Allergy and Immunology (ABAI), a Conjoint Board of the ABIM and the ABP. Diplomates of the ABAI have detailed knowledge of the underlying pathophysiology and the diagnosis, treatment, and prevention of allergic diseases such as allergic rhinitis, allergic asthma, urticaria, anaphylaxis, hypersensitivity pneumonitis, atopic and contact dermatitis, and allergic gastrointestinal disorders, as well as comparable clinical problems without an apparent allergic etiology or component such as vasomotor rhinitis, nonallergic asthma, and idiopathic and/or hereditary forms of urticaria and/or angioedema. Diplomates also have expertise in the management of pulmonary complications of certain of these diseases.

Diplomates of the ABAI also possess advanced understanding of the biology of inflammation, immunochemistry, immunobiology, and pharmacology and experience in the application of this knowledge to the diagnosis, management, and therapy of immunologic diseases. This includes inborn or acquired defects of host resistance, autoimmune diseases, bone marrow and solid organ transplantation, gene replacement therapy, adverse drug reactions, and related conditions. Diplomates have demonstrated to the satisfaction of their peers that they possess the general qualifications specified and are ethical and humanistic practitioners of medicine.

Source: American Board of Allergy and Immunology

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Prior completion of internal medicine or pediatrics program; length of accredited programs is 2 years.

Subspecialties

No subspecialty programs accredited by the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education; no subspecialty certificates offered by the ABAI. The ABAI, however, does offer formal special pathways for physicians seeking dual certification in allergy/immunology and pediatric pulmonology; allergy/immunology and pediatric rheumatology; and allergy/immunology and adult rheumatology. Additional information regarding special pathways is available upon request to the ABAI.

Anesthesiology

Professional Description

An anesthesiologist is trained to provide pain relief and maintenance, or restoration, of a stable condition during and immediately following an operation or an obstetric or diagnostic procedure. The anesthesiologist assesses the risk of the patient undergoing surgery and optimizes the patient's condition prior to, during, and after surgery. In addition to these management responsibilities, the anesthesiologist provides medical management and consultation in pain management and critical care medicine. Anesthesiologists

- Diagnose and treat acute, long-standing and cancer pain problems
- Diagnose and treat patients with critical illnesses or severe injuries
- Direct resuscitation in the care of patients with cardiac or respiratory emergencies, including the need for artificial ventilation
- Supervise post-anesthesia recovery

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Length of accredited programs is 3 years or 4 years (the latter includes the clinical base year).

SubspecialtiesSubspecialty programs accredited by the ACGME

- Adult cardiothoracic anesthesiology
 - Critical care medicine
 - Pain medicine*
 - Pediatric anesthesiology
- * In 2007, ACGME-accredited pain medicine programs under anesthesiology, neurology, physical medicine and rehabilitation, and psychiatry were combined into a multidisciplinary pain medicine subspecialty.

Subspecialty certificates offered by the American Board of Anesthesiology

- Critical care medicine
Hospice and palliative medicine
- Pain medicine

Adult Cardiothoracic Anesthesiology

Professional Description

Adult cardiothoracic anesthesiology is "devoted to the preoperative, intraoperative, and postoperative care of adult patients undergoing cardiothoracic surgery and related invasive procedures."

Fellows "should be proficient in providing anesthesia care for patients undergoing cardiac surgery with and without extracorporeal circulation, and thoracic surgery including operations on the lung, esophagus, and thoracic aorta. The curriculum should also include experience with patients undergoing nonoperative diagnostic and interventional cardiac, thoracic, and electrophysiological procedures. In addition, the cardiothoracic anesthesiology fellow should develop skills in the conduct of preoperative patient evaluation and interpretation of cardiovascular and pulmonary diagnostic test data, hemodynamic and respiratory monitoring, advanced-level perioperative transesophageal echocardiography (TEE), management of cardiopulmonary bypass (CPB), pharmacological and mechanical hemodynamic support, perioperative critical care, including ventilatory support and perioperative pain management."

See page 99.

Pediatric AnesthesiologyProfessional Description

A pediatric anesthesiologist is a fully trained anesthesiologist who has completed at least 1 year of specialized training in anesthesia care of infants and children. Most pediatric surgeons deliver care to children in the operating room along with a pediatric anesthesiologist. Many children who need surgery have very complex medical problems that affect many parts of the body. The pediatric anesthesiologist is best qualified to evaluate these complex problems and plan a safe anesthetic for each child.

Pediatric anesthesiologists treat children from the newborn period through the teenage years. They choose to make pediatric care the core of their medical practice, and the unique nature of medical and surgical care of children is learned from advanced training and experience in practice.

Pediatric anesthesiologists are responsible for the general anesthesia, sedation, and pain management needs of infants and children. Pediatric anesthesiologists generally provide the following services:

- Evaluation of complex medical problems in infants and children when surgery is needed
- Planning and care for before and after surgery
- A nonthreatening environment for children in the operating room
- Pain control, if needed after surgery, either with intravenous (IV) medications or other anesthetic techniques
- Anesthesia and sedation for many procedures out of the operating room such as MRI, CT scan, and radiation therapy

Professional Description

A colon and rectal surgeon is trained to diagnose and treat various diseases of the intestinal tract, colon, rectum, anal canal, and perianal area by medical and surgical means. This specialist also deals with other organs and tissues (such as the liver, urinary, and female reproductive system) involved with primary intestinal disease.

Colon and rectal surgeons have the expertise to diagnose and often manage anorectal conditions such as hemorrhoids, fissures (painful tears in the anal lining), abscesses, and fistulae (infections located around the anus and rectum) in the office setting.

They also treat problems of the intestine and colon and perform endoscopic procedures to evaluate and treat problems such as cancer, polyps (precancerous growths), and inflammatory conditions.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Prior completion a minimum of 5 years of a general surgery program; length of accredited programs is 1 year.

Subspecialties

No subspecialty programs accredited by the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education; no subspecialty certificates offered by the American Board of Colon and Rectal Surgery.

Dermatology

Professional Description

A dermatologist is trained to diagnose and treat pediatric and adult patients with benign and malignant disorders of the skin, mouth, external genitalia, hair, and nails, and those with a number of sexually transmitted diseases. The dermatologist has had additional training and experience in the diagnosis and treatment of skin cancers, melanomas, moles, and other tumors of the skin, the management of contact dermatitis, and other allergic and nonallergic skin disorders, and in the recognition of the skin manifestations of systemic (including internal malignancy) and infectious diseases. Dermatologists have special training in dermatopathology and in the surgical techniques used in dermatology. They also have expertise in the management of cosmetic disorders of the skin, such as hair loss and scars, and the skin changes associated with aging.

Dermatologists perform many specialized diagnostic procedures including microscopic examination of skin biopsy specimens, cytological smears, patch tests, photo tests, potassium hydroxide (KOH) preparations, fungus cultures, and other microbiologic examination of skin scrapings and secretions. Treatment methods used by dermatologists include externally applied, injected, and internal medications, selected x-ray and ultraviolet light therapy, and a range of dermatologic surgical procedures. The training and experience of dermatologists in dermatologic surgery include electrosurgery, cryosurgery with the use of freezing surgical units, laser surgery, nail surgery, biopsy techniques and excisional surgery with appropriate closures, including flaps and grafts. Among some of the techniques used by dermatologists for the correction of cosmetic defects are dermabrasion, chemical face peels, hair transplants, injections of materials into the skin for scar revision, sclerosis of veins, and laser surgery of vascular lesions of the skin, including certain birth marks. Patients seeking a dermatologist may come directly or may be referred by another physician. A certified specialist in dermatology may subspecialize and become certified for Special Qualification.

Sports Medicine

Professional Description

A family physician who is trained to be responsible for continuous care in the field of sports medicine, not only for the enhancement of health and fitness, but also for the prevention of injury and illness. A sports medicine physician must have knowledge and experience in the promotion of wellness and the prevention of injury. Knowledge about special areas of medicine such as exercise physiology, biomechanics, nutrition, psychology, physical rehabilitation, epidemiology, physical evaluation, injuries (treatment and prevention and referral practice), and the role of exercise in promoting a healthy lifestyle are essential to the practice of sports medicine. The sports medicine physician requires special education to provide the knowledge to improve the health care of the individual engaged in physical exercise (sports) whether as an individual or in team participation.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Completion of an ACGME-accredited residency is required; ACGME-accredited programs are 1 year.

Internal Medicine

Professional Description

Internal medicine is the largest primary care specialty in the United States and is an ever-changing and rapidly advancing discipline. Doctors of internal medicine are known as “internists” or “general internists,” and should not be confused with “interns” who are doctors in their first year of training after medical school. Internists are not the same as “general practitioners” (GPs) or “family physicians” (FPs) whose practices may include surgery, obstetrics, and pediatrics and whose training is not solely concentrated on adults.

Because internal medicine is expansive, internists must continually update their knowledge in many areas including allergy, arthritis, blood diseases, cancer, diabetes, digestive diseases, illness in the elderly, diseases of the heart and blood vessels, hormonal disorders, infections, intensive care, kidney diseases, and respiratory disorders.

The practice of internal medicine also incorporates an understanding of wellness (disease prevention and health promotion), women’s health, substance abuse, mental health, and medical ethics, as well as effective treatment of common problems of the eyes, ears, skin, nervous system, and reproductive organs.

Sports Medicine

Professional Description

An internist trained to be responsible for continuous care in the field of sports medicine, not only for the enhancement of health and fitness, but also for the prevention of injury and illness. A sports medicine physician must have knowledge and experience in the promotion of wellness and the prevention of injury. Knowledge about special areas of medicine such as exercise physiology, biomechanics, nutrition, psychology, physical rehabilitation, epidemiology, physical evaluation, injuries (treatment and prevention and referral practice), and the role of exercise in promoting a healthy lifestyle are essential to the practice of sports medicine. The sports medicine physician requires special education to provide the knowledge to improve the health care of the individual engaged in physical exercise (sports) whether as an individual or in team participation.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Completion of a 3-year ACGME-accredited residency program in internal medicine is required; ACGME-accredited programs in sports medicine (as a subspecialty of emergency medicine, family medicine, or pediatrics) are 1 year. Note: As of June 2006, programs in sports medicine as a subspecialty of internal medicine are no longer accredited by the ACGME.

Transplant Hepatology

Professional Description

An internist with special knowledge and the skill required of a gastroenterologist to care for patients prior to and following hepatic transplantation that spans all phases of liver transplantation. Selection of appropriate recipients requires assessment by a team having experience in evaluating the severity and prognosis of patients with liver disease.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Completion of a 3-year ACGME-accredited gastroenterology program is required; programs are 1 year.

Internal Medicine/Pediatrics

Description

Internal medicine/pediatrics is a combined specialty program that allows physicians to meet eligibility requirements for dual certification by the American Board of Internal Medicine and American Board of Pediatrics. Internal medicine/pediatrics programs were formerly jointly approved (not accredited) by the two boards, but are now fully accredited through the ACGME (Program Requirements effective June 26, 2006).

Prerequisites; Length of Training

No prerequisites; length of accredited programs is 4 years.

Medical Genetics

Professional Description

A specialist trained in diagnostic and therapeutic procedures for patients with genetically linked diseases. This specialist uses modern cytogenetic, radiologic, and biochemical testing to assist in specialized genetic counseling, implements needed therapeutic interventions, and provides prevention through prenatal diagnosis.

A medical geneticist plans and coordinates large-scale screening programs for inborn errors of metabolism, hemoglobinopathies, chromosome abnormalities, and neural tube defects.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

No prerequisites are required when entering a 4-year program; 2 years of ACGME-accredited GME are required when entering a 2-year program. Length of accredited programs is 2 years or 4 years.

Subspecialties

Subspecialty programs accredited by the ACGME

- Molecular genetic pathology
- Medical biochemical genetics

Note: Molecular genetic pathology programs are jointly accredited by the Residency Review Committees for Medical Genetics and Pathology.

American Board of Medical Genetics specialty certificates

- Clinical biochemical genetics
- Clinical cytogenetics
- Clinical genetics
- Clinical molecular genetics
- Molecular genetic pathology (subspecialty)

Note: Molecular genetic pathology certification is jointly offered by the American Board of Medical Genetics and American Board of Pathology.

Clinical Biochemical GeneticsProfessional Description

A clinical biochemical geneticist is an individual with a US- or Canadian-earned, or the equivalent of an earned, doctoral degree (MD, DO, PhD) who can correctly perform and interpret biochemical analyses relevant to the diagnosis and management of human genetic diseases and who acts as a consultant regarding laboratory diagnosis of a broad range of biochemical genetic disorders.

These requirements imply that the individual possesses

- The ability to supervise and direct the operations of a clinical biochemical genetics diagnostic laboratory, including technical expertise and knowledge in quality control and quality assessment procedures
- Broad knowledge of (1) basic biochemistry and genetics, (2) the application of biochemical techniques to the diagnosis and management of genetic diseases, and (3) the etiology, pathogenesis, clinical manifestations, and management of human inherited biochemical disorders
- An understanding of the heterogeneity, variability, and natural history of biochemical genetic disorders
- Diagnostic and interpretive skills in a wide range of biochemical genetic problems
- The ability to communicate biochemical laboratory results in the capacity of consultant to medical genetics professionals and other clinicians and directly to patients in concert with other professional staff

Clinical CytogeneticsProfessional Description

A clinical cytogeneticist is an individual with a US- or Canadian-earned, or the equivalent of an earned, doctoral degree (MD, DO, PhD) who can correctly perform and interpret cytogenetic analyses relevant to the diagnosis and management of human genetic diseases and who acts as a consultant regarding laboratory diagnosis for a broad range of cytogenetic disorders, including inherited and acquired conditions.

These requirements imply that the individual possesses

- The ability to supervise and direct the operations of a clinical cytogenetic diagnostic laboratory, including technical expertise and knowledge in quality control and quality assessment procedures
- Broad knowledge in human cytogenetics, including prenatal and postnatal cytogenetic diagnosis, infertility and pregnancy loss, cancer, and leukemia
- An understanding of the heterogeneity, variability, and natural history of cytogenetic disorders

- Diagnostic and interpretive skills in a wide range of cytogenetic problems
- The ability to communicate cytogenetic laboratory results in the capacity of consultant to medical genetics professionals and other clinicians and directly to patients in concert with other professional staff

Clinical Genetics (MD)

Professional Description

A clinical geneticist is an individual who holds a US- or Canadian-earned, or the equivalent of an earned, MD or DO degree, has had 2 years in an ACGME-accredited clinical residency program in another medical specialty, 2 years in an ACGME-accredited residency in clinical genetics (or 4 years in an accredited clinical genetics residency program), a valid medical license, and demonstrates competence to provide comprehensive genetic diagnostic, management, therapeutic, and counseling services.

These requirements imply that the individual possesses

- Broad knowledge in human and medical genetics, including an understanding of heterogeneity, variability, and natural history of genetic disorders
- Diagnostic and therapeutic skills in a wide range of genetic disorders
- The ability to elicit and interpret individual and family histories
- The ability to integrate clinical and genetic information and understand the uses, limitations, interpretation, and significance of specialized laboratory and clinical procedures
- Expertise in genetic and mathematical principles to perform risk assessment
- Skills in interviewing and counseling techniques required to (1) elicit from the patient or family the information necessary to reach an appropriate conclusion; (2) anticipate areas of difficulty and conflict; (3) help families and individuals recognize and cope with their emotional and psychological needs; (4) recognize situations requiring psychiatric referral; and (5) transmit pertinent information in a way that is comprehensible to the individual or family
- knowledge of available health care resources (community, regional, and national) required for appropriate referral or support

Clinical Molecular Genetics

Professional Description

A clinical molecular geneticist is an individual with a US- or Canadian-earned, or the equivalent of an earned, doctoral degree (MD, DO, PhD) who can correctly perform and interpret molecular analyses relevant to the diagnosis and management of human genetic diseases and who can act as a consultant regarding laboratory diagnosis of a broad range of molecular genetic disorders.

These requirements imply that the individual possesses

- The ability to supervise and direct the operations of a clinical molecular genetics diagnostic laboratory, including technical experience and knowledge in quality control and quality assessment procedures
- The ability to perform a variety of molecular diagnostic assays
- An understanding of the heterogeneity, variability, and natural history of molecular genetic disorders
- A broad knowledge of (1) basic molecular biology and genetics; (2) the application of recombinant DNA techniques and linkage analysis to the diagnosis of genetic diseases; and (3) the etiology, pathogenesis, clinical manifestations, and management of human genetic disorders
- Diagnostic and interpretive skills in a wide range of clinical molecular genetics problems
- The ability to communicate molecular diagnostic laboratory results in the capacity of a consultant to medical genetics professionals and other clinicians and directly to patients in concert with other professional staff

Molecular Genetic Pathology

Professional Description

A molecular genetic pathologist is expert in the principles, theory, and technologies of molecular biology and molecular genetics. This expertise is used to make or confirm diagnoses of Mendelian genetic disorders, of human development, infectious diseases and malignancies, and to assess the natural history of those disorders. A molecular genetic pathologist provides information about gene structure, function, and alteration and applies laboratory techniques for diagnosis, treatment, and prognosis for individuals with related disorders.

Source: American Board of Medical Genetics

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Completion of a 4-year ACGME-accredited program in pathology or medical genetics is required. Length of ACGME-accredited molecular genetic pathology programs is 1 year.

Neurological Surgery

Professional Description

Neurological surgery is a discipline of medicine and the specialty of surgery that provides the operative and nonoperative management (ie, prevention, diagnosis, evaluation, treatment, critical care, and rehabilitation) of disorders of the central, peripheral, and autonomic nervous systems, including their supporting structures and vascular supply; the evaluation and treatment of pathological processes that modify the function or activity of the nervous system, including the hypophysis; and the operative and nonoperative management of pain. As such, neurological surgery encompasses the surgical, nonsurgical, and stereotactic radiosurgical treatment of adult and pediatric patients with disorders of the nervous system: disorders of the brain, meninges, skull, and skull base, and their blood supply, including the surgical and endovascular treatment of disorders of the intracranial and extracranial vasculature supplying the brain and spinal cord; disorders of the pituitary gland; disorders of the spinal cord, meninges, and vertebral column, including those that may require treatment by fusion, instrumentation, or endovascular techniques; and disorders of the cranial, peripheral, and spinal nerves throughout their distribution.

Endovascular Surgical Neuroradiology

Professional Description

Endovascular surgical neuroradiology is a subspecialty that uses catheter technology, radiologic imaging, and clinical expertise to diagnose and treat diseases of the central nervous system. Practitioners have training and experience in:

- Signs and symptoms of disorders amenable to diagnosis and treatment by endovascular surgical neuroradiology techniques
- Neurological examinations to evaluate patients with neurological disorders
- Pathophysiology and natural history of these disorders
- Indications and contraindications to endovascular surgical neuroradiology procedures
- Clinical and technical aspects of endovascular surgical neuroradiology procedures
- Medical and surgical alternatives
- Preoperative and postoperative management of endovascular patients
- Neurointensive care management
- Fundamentals of imaging physics and radiation biology
- Interpretation of radiographic studies pertinent to the practice

Neurology

Professional Description

A neurologist specializes in the diagnosis and treatment of all types of disease or impaired function of the brain, spinal cord, peripheral nerves, muscles, and autonomic nervous system, as well as the blood vessels that relate to these structures. A child neurologist has special skills in the diagnosis and management of neurological disorders of the neonatal period, infancy, early childhood, and adolescence.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Programs are either 3 years or 4 years. Residents entering a 3-year program must have completed 1 year in an accredited program in the US or Canada.

Subspecialties

Subspecialty programs accredited by the ACGME

- Child neurology
- Clinical neurophysiology
- Endovascular surgical neuroradiology
- Neurodevelopmental disabilities
- Neuromuscular medicine
- Pain medicine*
- Sleep medicine
- Vascular neurology

* In 2007, ACGME-accredited pain medicine programs under anesthesiology, neurology, physical medicine and rehabilitation, and psychiatry were combined into a multidisciplinary pain medicine subspecialty.

American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology subspecialty certificates

- Child neurology (special certification)
- Clinical neurophysiology
- Hospice and palliative medicine
- Neurodevelopmental disabilities
- Pain medicine
- Sleep medicine
- Vascular neurology

Nuclear Medicine

Professional Description

A nuclear medicine specialist employs the properties of radioactive atoms and molecules in the diagnosis and treatment of disease and in research. Radiation detection and imaging instrument systems are used to detect disease as it changes the function and metabolism of normal cells, tissues, and organs. A wide variety of diseases can be found in this way, usually before the structure of the organ involved by the disease can be seen to be abnormal by any other techniques. Early detection of coronary artery disease (including acute heart attack); early cancer detection and evaluation of the effect of tumor treatment; diagnosis of infection and inflammation anywhere in the body; and early detection of blood clot in the lungs are all possible with these techniques. Unique forms of radioactive molecules can attack and kill cancer cells (eg, lymphoma, thyroid cancer) or can relieve the severe pain of cancer that has spread to bone.

The nuclear medicine specialist has special knowledge in the biologic effects of radiation exposure, the fundamentals of the physical sciences, and the principles and operation of radiation detection and imaging instrumentation systems.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Prior to entering a nuclear medicine program, residents must have completed 1 year of broad clinical education in an accredited program in the US or Canada. Nuclear medicine programs are 3 years (as of July 1, 2007).

Subspecialties

No subspecialty programs accredited by the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education; no subspecialty certificates offered by the American Board of Nuclear Medicine.

Orthopaedic Surgery

Professional Description

An orthopaedic surgeon is trained in preserving, investigating, and restoring the form and function of the extremities, spine, and associated structures by medical, surgical, and physical means.

An orthopaedic surgeon is involved with the care of patients whose musculoskeletal problems include congenital deformities, trauma, infections, tumors, metabolic disturbances of the musculoskeletal system, deformities, injuries, and degenerative diseases of the spine, hands, feet, knee, hip, shoulder, and elbow in children and adults. An orthopaedic surgeon is also concerned with primary and secondary muscular problems and the effects of central or peripheral nervous system lesions of the musculoskeletal system.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

No previous GME is required; length of accredited programs is 5 years.

Subspecialties

Subspecialty programs accredited by the ACGME

- Adult reconstructive orthopaedics
- Foot and ankle orthopaedics
- Hand surgery
- Musculoskeletal oncology
- Orthopaedic sports medicine
- Orthopaedic surgery of the spine
- Orthopaedic trauma
- Pediatric orthopaedics

American Board of Orthopaedic Surgery subspecialty certificates

- Orthopaedic sports medicine
- Surgery of the hand

Orthopaedic Sports Medicine

Professional Description

An orthopaedic surgeon trained in sports medicine provides appropriate care for all structures of the musculoskeletal system directly affected by participation in sporting activity.

A sports medicine surgeon is proficient in areas including conditioning, training, and fitness; athletic performance and the impact of dietary supplements, pharmaceuticals, and nutrition on performance and health; coordination of care within the team setting and utilizing other health care professionals; field evaluation and management; and soft tissue biomechanics injury, healing and repair. The specialist understands treatment options, both surgical and nonsurgical, as they relate to sports specific injuries and competition. Knowledge in understanding the principles and techniques of rehabilitation, athletic equipment, and orthoptic devices enables the specialist to prevent and manage athletic injuries.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Completion of an accredited residency is required. Length of ACGME-accredited programs is 1 year.

Neurotology

Professional Description

An otolaryngologist who treats diseases of the ear and temporal bone, including disorders of hearing and balance. The additional training in otology and neurotology emphasizes the study of embryology, anatomy, physiology, epidemiology, pathophysiology, pathology, genetics, immunology, microbiology, and the etiology of diseases of the ear and temporal bone.

The neurotologist should have command of the core knowledge and understanding of:

- The basic medical sciences relevant to the temporal bone, lateral skull base, and related structures; the communication sciences, including knowledge of audiology, endocrinology, and neurology as they relate to the temporal bone, lateral skull base, and related structures
- Advanced diagnostic expertise and advanced medical and surgical management skills for the care of diseases and disorders of the petrous apex, infratemporal fossa, internal auditory canals, cranial nerves, and lateral skull base (including the occipital bone, sphenoid bone, temporal bone, mesial aspect of the dura and intradural management), in conjunction with neurological surgery

A neurotologist has acquired expertise in the medical and surgical management of diseases and disorders of the temporal bone, lateral skull base, and related structures beyond that inherent to the practice of otolaryngology-head and neck surgery

Source: American Board of Otolaryngology

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Completion of an accredited otolaryngology residency is required. Length of ACGME-accredited programs is 2 years.

Blood Banking/Transfusion Medicine

Professional Description

A physician who specializes in blood banking/transfusion medicine is responsible for the maintenance of an adequate blood supply, blood donor and patient-recipient safety, and appropriate blood utilization. Pretransfusion compatibility testing and antibody testing assure that blood transfusions, when indicated, are as safe as possible. This physician directs the preparation and safe use of specially prepared blood components, including red blood cells, white blood cells, platelets, plasma constituents, and marrow or stem cells for transplantation.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

A minimum of 3 years of prior GME is required. Length of ACGME-accredited programs is 1 year.

Cytopathology

Professional Description

A cytopathologist is an anatomic pathologist trained in the diagnosis of human disease by means of the study of cells obtained from body secretions and fluids, by scraping, washing, or sponging the surface of a lesion, or by the aspiration of a tumor mass or body organ with a fine needle. A major aspect of a cytopathologist's practice is the interpretation of Papanicolaou-stained smears of cells from the female reproductive systems, the "Pap" test. However, the cytopathologist's expertise is applied to the diagnosis of cells from all systems and areas of the body. He/she is a consultant to all medical specialists.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Medical Microbiology

Professional Description

A medical microbiologist is expert in the isolation and identification of microbial agents that cause infectious disease. Viruses, bacteria, and fungi, as well as parasites, are identified and, where possible, tested for susceptibility to appropriate antimicrobial agents.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Required prerequisites are completion of an ACGME-accredited residency in anatomic pathology and clinical pathology, anatomic pathology, or clinical pathology, or completion of an ACGME-accredited residency in another primary medical specialty and completion of an ACGME-accredited fellowship in infectious disease. Length of ACGME-accredited program is 1 year.

Molecular Genetic PathologyProfessional Description

A molecular genetic pathologist is expert in the principles, theory, and technologies of molecular biology and molecular genetics. This expertise is used to make or confirm diagnoses of Mendelian genetic disorders, disorders of human development, and infectious diseases and malignancies, and to assess the natural history of those disorders. A molecular genetic pathologist provides information about gene structure, function, and alteration and applies laboratory techniques for diagnosis, treatment, and prognosis for individuals with related disorders.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Completion of a 4-year ACGME-accredited program in pathology or medical genetics is required. Length of ACGME-accredited molecular genetic pathology programs is 1 year.

Pediatrics

Professional Description

Pediatrics is the specialty of medical science concerned with the physical, emotional, and social health of children from birth to young adulthood. Pediatric care encompasses a broad spectrum of health services ranging from preventive health care to the diagnosis and treatment of acute and chronic diseases.

Pediatrics is a discipline that deals with biological, social, and environmental influences on the developing child and with the impact of disease and dysfunction on development. Children differ from adults anatomically, physiologically, immunologically, psychologically, developmentally, and metabolically.

The pediatrician understands this constantly changing functional status of his or her patients incident to growth and development and the consequent changing standards of "normal" for age. A pediatrician is a medical specialist who is primarily concerned with the health, welfare, and development of children and is uniquely qualified for these endeavors by virtue of interest and initial training. Maintenance of these competencies is achieved by experience, training, continuous education, self-assessment, and practice improvement.

A pediatrician is able to define accurately the child's health status as well as to serve as a consultant and to make use of other specialists as consultants. Because the child's welfare is heavily dependent on the home and family, the pediatrician supports efforts to create a nurturing environment. Such support includes education about healthful living and anticipatory guidance for both patients and parents.

A pediatrician participates at the community level in preventing or solving problems in child health care and publicly advocates the causes of children.

Pediatric Sports Medicine

Professional Description

A pediatrician responsible for continuous care in the field of sports medicine, not only for the enhancement of health and fitness, but also for the prevention of injury and illness. A sports medicine physician must have knowledge and experience in the promotion of wellness and the prevention of injury. Knowledge about special areas of medicine such as exercise physiology, biomechanics, nutrition, psychology, physical rehabilitation, epidemiology, physical evaluation, injuries (treatment and prevention and referral practice), and the role of exercise in promoting a healthy lifestyle are essential to the practice of sports medicine. The sports medicine physician requires special education to provide the knowledge to improve the health care of the individual engaged in physical exercise (sports) whether as an individual or as part of a team.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

A minimum of 3 years of prior GME is required. Length of ACGME-accredited programs is 1 year.

Pediatric Transplant Hepatology

Professional Description

A pediatrician with expertise in transplant hepatology encompasses the special knowledge and skill required of pediatric gastroenterologists to care for patients prior to and following hepatic transplantation; it spans all phases of liver transplantation.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

A minimum of 6 years of prior GME is required. For certification, the ABP requires 1 year in a transplant hepatology program that is associated with a pediatric gastroenterology program accredited by the ACGME or RCPSC.

Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation

Professional Description

A physician certified in physical medicine and rehabilitation is often called a physiatrist. The primary goal of the physiatrist is to achieve maximal restoration of physical, psychological, social, and vocational function through comprehensive rehabilitation. Pain management is often an important part of the role of the physiatrist. For diagnosis and evaluation, a physiatrist may include the techniques of electromyography to supplement the standard history, physical, X-ray, and laboratory examinations. The physiatrist has expertise in the appropriate use of therapeutic exercise, prosthetics (artificial limbs), orthotics, and mechanical and electrical devices.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

No previous GME is required when entering an accredited 4-year program that includes 12 months of fundamental clinical skills in areas other than physical medicine and rehabilitation; 1 year of previous GME (eg, Transitional Year) is required when entering a 3-year program.

Subspecialties

Subspecialty programs accredited by the ACGME

- Pain medicine*
 - Pediatric rehabilitation medicine
 - Spinal cord injury medicine
- * In 2007, ACGME-accredited pain medicine programs under anesthesiology, neurology, physical medicine and rehabilitation, and psychiatry were combined into a multidisciplinary pain medicine subspecialty.

American Board of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation subspecialty certificates

- Hospice and palliative medicine
- Neuromuscular medicine
- Pain medicine
- Pediatric rehabilitation medicine
- Spinal cord injury medicine

Plastic Surgery

Professional Description

Plastic surgery deals with the repair, reconstruction, or replacement of physical defects of form or function involving the skin, musculoskeletal system, craniomaxillofacial structures, hand, extremities, breast and trunk, external genitalia or cosmetic enhancement of these areas of the body. Cosmetic surgery is an essential component of plastic surgery. The plastic surgeon uses cosmetic surgical principles both to improve overall appearance and to optimize the outcome of reconstructive procedures.

Special knowledge and skill in the design and surgery of grafts, flaps, free tissue transfer and replantation is necessary. Competence in the management of complex wounds, the use of implantable materials, and in tumor surgery is required. Plastic surgeons have been prominent in the development of innovative techniques such as microvascular and craniomaxillofacial surgery, liposuction, and tissue transfer. Anatomy, physiology, pathology, and other basic sciences are fundamental to the specialty.

Competency in plastic surgery implies an amalgam of basic medical and surgical knowledge, operative judgment, technical expertise, ethical behavior, and interpersonal skills to achieve problem resolution and patient satisfaction.

Source: American Board of Plastic Surgery

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Accredited plastic surgery programs are either independent (2 to 3 years length) or integrated (5 to 6 years). Prerequisites for the independent programs are 1) a minimum of 3 years clinical education with progressive responsibility in a general surgery program; 2) completion of a neurological surgery, orthopaedic surgery, otolaryngology, or urology residency; or 3) completion of an educational program in oral and maxillofacial surgery approved by the American Dental Association (for individuals holding the DMD/MD or DDS/MD degree).

Craniofacial Surgery (Plastic Surgery within the Head and Neck)

Professional Description

A plastic surgeon with additional training in plastic and reconstructive procedures within the head, face, neck, and associated structures, including cutaneous head and neck oncology and reconstruction, management of maxillofacial trauma, soft tissue repair, and neural surgery.

The field is diverse and involves a wide age range of patients, from the newborn to the aged. While both cosmetic and reconstructive surgery are practiced, there are many additional procedures that interface with them. Cosmetic procedures include otoplasty; surgery of the aging face (brow lift, blepharoplasty, face lift); rhinoplasty; facial implants (cheek, nasal, and chin); facial resurfacing; and liposuction/lipoplasty. Reconstructive procedures performed include maxillofacial trauma; skin grafts and flaps; repair of congenital facial defects (hemangiomas, cleft lip and palate, nasal abnormalities); reconstruction of the jaws and other facial bones; reanimation/rehabilitation of the paralyzed face; nerve repair; periorbital surgery; and biomedical implant insertion. Areas of research in this field include materials biocompatibility; wound healing adjuncts; skin repair/regeneration; and bone reconstruction.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Completion of a 6-year plastic surgery program or other appropriate surgery training is required. Length of ACGME-accredited programs is 1 year.

Preventive Medicine

Professional Description

A preventive medicine specialist focuses on the health of individuals and defined populations to protect, promote, and maintain health and well-being and to prevent disease, disability, and premature death. The distinctive components of preventive medicine include:

- Biostatistics and the application of biostatistical principles and methodology
- Epidemiology and its application to population-based medicine and research
- Health services management and administration, including developing, assessing, and assuring health policies; planning, implementing, directing, budgeting, and evaluating population health and disease management programs; and utilizing legislative and regulatory processes to enhance health
- Control of environmental factors that may adversely affect health
- Control and prevention of occupational factors that may adversely affect health safety
- Clinical preventive medicine activities, including measures to promote health and prevent the occurrence, progression, and disabling effects of disease and injury
- Assessment of social, cultural, and behavioral influences on health

A preventive medicine physician may be a specialist in general preventive medicine, public health, occupational medicine, or aerospace medicine. This specialist works with large population groups as well as with individual patients to promote health and understand the risks of disease, injury, disability, and death, seeking to modify and eliminate these risks.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Accredited programs are either 1, 2, or 3 years in length.

Aerospace MedicineProfessional Description

Aerospace medicine concerns the determination and maintenance of the health, safety, and performance of persons involved in air and space travel. Aerospace medicine, as a broad field of endeavor, offers dynamic challenges and opportunities for physicians, nurses, physiologists, bioenvironmental engineers, industrial hygienists, environmental health practitioners, human factors specialists, psychologists, and other professionals. Those in the field are dedicated to enhancing health, promoting safety, and improving performance of individuals who work or travel in unusual environments. The environments of space and aviation provide significant challenges, such as microgravity, radiation exposure, G-forces, emergency ejection injuries, and hypoxic conditions, for those embarking in their exploration. Areas of interest range from space and atmospheric flight to undersea activities, and the environments that are studied cover a wide spectrum, extending from the "microenvironments" of space or diving suits to those of "Spaceship Earth."

Occupational Medicine

Professional Description

Occupational and environmental medicine is perhaps the most wide ranging of all medical specialties. It is the medical specialty devoted to prevention and management of occupational and environmental injury, illness and disability, and promotion of health and productivity of workers, their families, and communities.

Occupational medicine was previously identified as "industrial medicine." This term was used when heavy industry (eg, lumbering, automobile manufacturing, mining, railroads, steel manufacturers, etc) employed physicians to provide acute medical and surgical care for employees. By 1945, medical programs had spread to business organizations with a predominance of clerical and service employees. Large banks, insurance companies, mercantile establishments, etc., could not be described as industrial; therefore, the broader designation of "occupational medicine" came into common use.

Today, the complexity and pervasiveness of modern industrial processes afford occupational and environmental medicine physicians the opportunity to address work site and environmental concerns and such community health and policy issues as atmospheric pollution, product safety, health promotion, and benefits value management. The term "environmental medicine" has also recently been used to describe this growing, challenging, modern medical specialty. Environmental medicine has been defined as the branch of medical science that addresses the impact of chemical and physical stressors on individuals and groups. Both occupational and environmental medicine use similar skills and focus on the recognition and prevention of hazardous exposures.

Public Health and General Preventive Medicine

Professional Description

A public health physician helps guide a community, agency, health organization, medical office, or program in pursuit of group or community health goals. This includes physicians who plan, provide, and administer public health and preventive medicine services in public, private, or voluntary settings.

The public health practitioner:

- Performs epidemiological investigations of acute and chronic diseases and injuries
- Uses appropriate statistical techniques in the design of studies and interpretation of findings relative to disease interventions performed on individuals and in monitoring and experimental protocols
- Plans, administers, and evaluates programs to promote health and prevent disease in medical practice settings and in public health agencies
- Designs, performs, and evaluates clinical trials
- Applies clinical interventions in the general population

- Assesses health risk factors in individual persons and groups and prescribes appropriate interventions
- Assesses and ameliorates the impact of environmental and occupational risk factors on individual persons and on groups
- Assesses the clinical and public health program needs of populations, eg, workers, communities, and military groups

Medical Toxicology

Professional Description

A specialist who is expert in evaluating and managing patients with accidental or intentional poisoning through exposure to prescription and nonprescription medications, drugs of abuse, household or industrial toxins, and environmental toxins.

Important areas of medical toxicology include acute pediatric and adult drug ingestion; drug abuse, addiction, and withdrawal; chemical poisoning exposure and toxicity; hazardous materials exposure and toxicity; and occupational toxicology.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Completion of an ACGME-accredited residency is required; length of accredited programs is 2 years.

Psychiatry

Professional Description

A psychiatrist specializes in the prevention, diagnosis, and treatment of mental, addictive, and emotional disorders such as schizophrenia and other psychotic disorders, mood disorders, anxiety disorders, substance-related disorders, sexual and gender identity disorders, and adjustment disorders. The psychiatrist is able to understand the biologic, psychologic, and social components of illness, and therefore is uniquely prepared to treat the whole person. A psychiatrist is qualified to order diagnostic laboratory tests and to prescribe medications, evaluate and treat psychologic and interpersonal problems, and intervene with families who are coping with stress, crises, and other problems in living.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

No previous GME is required. ACGME-accredited programs are 4 years.

Physicians may also enter programs at the GY2 level only after successfully completing one of the following:

- One clinical year of training in an ACGME-accredited internal medicine, family medicine, or pediatrics program
- An ACGME-accredited transitional year program
- One year of an ACGME-accredited residency in a clinical specialty requiring comprehensive and continuous patient care

For physicians entering at the GY2 level, the GY1 year may be credited toward the 48-month requirement.

Psychosomatic MedicineProfessional Description

A psychiatrist who specializes in the diagnosis and treatment of psychiatric disorders and symptoms in complex medically ill patients. This subspecialty includes treatment of patients with acute or chronic medical, neurological, obstetrical, or surgical illness in which psychiatric illness is affecting their medical care and/or quality of life; such as HIV infection, organ transplantation, heart disease, renal failure, cancer, stroke, traumatic brain injury, high-risk pregnancy, and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, among others. Patients also may be those who have a psychiatric disorder that is the direct consequence of a primary medical condition, or a somatoform disorder or psychological factors affecting a general medical condition. Psychiatrists specializing in psychosomatic medicine provide consultation-liaison services in general medical hospitals, attend on medical psychiatry inpatient units, and provide collaborative care in primary care and other outpatient settings.

Radiology-Diagnostic

Professional Description

A radiologist utilizes radiologic methodologies to diagnose and treat disease. Physicians practicing in the field of radiology most often specialize in radiology, diagnostic radiology, radiation oncology, or radiologic physics.

A diagnostic radiologist utilizes x-ray, radionuclides, ultrasound, and electromagnetic radiation to diagnose and treat disease.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Resident education in diagnostic radiology includes 5 years of clinically oriented GME, of which 4 years must be in diagnostic radiology. The clinical year must consist of ACGME, RCPSC, or equivalent accredited training in internal medicine, pediatrics, surgery or surgical specialties, obstetrics and gynecology, neurology, family medicine, emergency medicine, or any combination of these, or an ACGME- or equivalent accredited transitional year. ACGME-accredited programs in diagnostic radiology are 4 years.

Abdominal Radiology

Professional Description

Abdominal radiology constitutes the application and interpretation of conventional radiology, computed tomography, ultrasonography, magnetic resonance (MR) imaging, nuclear medicine, fluoroscopy, and interventional methods customarily included within the specialty of diagnostic radiology as they apply to diseases involving the gastrointestinal tract, genitourinary tract, and the intraperitoneal and extra peritoneal abdominal organs.

Endovascular Surgical Neuroradiology

Professional Description

Endovascular surgical neuroradiology is a subspecialty that uses catheter technology, radiologic imaging, and clinical expertise to diagnose and treat diseases of the central nervous system. Practitioners have training and experience in:

- Signs and symptoms of disorders amenable to diagnosis and treatment by endovascular surgical neuroradiology techniques
- Neurological examinations to evaluate patients with neurological disorders
- Pathophysiology and natural history of these disorders
- Indications and contraindications to endovascular surgical neuroradiology procedures
- Clinical and technical aspects of endovascular surgical neuroradiology procedures
- Medical and surgical alternatives
- Preoperative and postoperative management of endovascular patients
- Neurointensive care management

- Fundamentals of imaging physics and radiation biology
- Interpretation of radiographic studies pertinent to the practice

Pediatric Radiology

Professional Description

A pediatric radiologist is proficient in all forms of diagnostic imaging as it pertains to treating diseases in the newborn, infant, child, and adolescent. This specialist has knowledge of both imaging and interventional procedures related to the care and management of diseases of children. A pediatric radiologist must be highly knowledgeable of all organ systems as they relate to growth and development, congenital malformations, diseases peculiar to infants and children, and diseases that begin in childhood but cause substantial residual impairment in adulthood.

Prerequisites; Length of Training

Satisfactory completion of an ACGME- or RCPSC-accredited diagnostic radiology residency, or other training judged suitable by the program director, is required. Length of ACGME-accredited programs is 1 year.

Sleep Medicine

Professional Description

Sleep medicine is a multidisciplinary subspecialty of family medicine, internal medicine, psychiatry, pediatrics, neurology, and otolaryngology.

Sleep medicine is a discipline of medical practice in which sleep disorders are assessed, monitored, treated, and prevented by using a combination of techniques (clinical evaluation, physiologic testing, imaging, and intervention) and medication. Specialists in sleep medicine are expected to:

- Participate in an interdisciplinary care of patients of all ages that incorporates aspects of psychiatry, neurology, internal medicine, epidemiology, surgery, pediatrics and basic science
- Acquire detailed knowledge of the sleep and respiratory control centers, physiology, and neurobiology underlying sleep and wakefulness
- Diagnose and manage sleep disorder patients in outpatient and inpatient settings

Source: Sleep Medicine Program Requirements, ACGME
www.acgme.org/acWebsite/downloads/RRC_progReq/520pr604_u605.pdf

This subspecialty includes the clinical assessment, polysomnographic evaluation, and treatment of sleep disorders, including insomnias, disorders of excessive sleepiness (eg, narcolepsy), sleep-related breathing disorders (such as obstructive sleep apnea), parasomnias, circadian rhythm disorders, sleep-related movement disorders, and other conditions pertaining to the sleep-wake cycle.

Surgery-General

Professional Description

The discipline of general surgery has a central core of knowledge embracing anatomy, physiology, metabolism, immunology, nutrition, pathology, wound healing, shock and resuscitation, intensive care, and neoplasia within the essential content areas outlined below.

Surgeons certified by the American Board of Surgery (ABS) have through their training acquired knowledge and experience related to the diagnosis and preoperative, operative, and postoperative management, including the management of complications, in the essential content areas listed below.

- Alimentary tract
- Abdomen and its contents
- Breast, skin, and soft tissue
- Endocrine system
- Head and neck surgery
- Pediatric surgery
- Surgical critical care
- Surgical oncology
- Trauma/burns
- Vascular surgery

The certified general surgeon is also expected to have:

- Preoperative, operative, and postoperative experience in transplantation surgery, plastic surgery (including familiarity with the role of breast reconstruction after mastectomy), and cardiothoracic surgery
- Significant experience in performing minimally invasive surgical procedures, including basic and advanced laparoscopic procedures
- Experience with endoscopic techniques, particularly proctosigmoidoscopy, colonoscopy, esophagogastroduodenoscopy, laryngoscopy, and bronchoscopy
- Experience with sentinel lymph node mapping for breast cancer and melanoma
- Experience with diagnostic ultrasonography, particularly of the following areas:
 - head and neck;
 - breast;
 - abdomen, including intraoperative and laparoscopic ultrasound; and
 - endorectal.
- Knowledge and skills in palliative care and management of pain, weight loss, and cachexia in patients with malignant and chronic conditions
- Familiarity with diagnostic and therapeutic techniques:
 - fine needle aspiration techniques for cytologic biopsy;
 - investigation and manipulation of the distal common bile duct (including sphincterotomy);
 - physiologic testing and evaluation of the gastrointestinal tract; and
 - noninvasive diagnostic evaluation of the vascular system and invasive vascular interventional techniques.
- Familiarity with the special requirements of bariatric and geriatric surgical patients, including operative care and counseling of patients and families
- An understanding of the administration of anesthetic agents, airway intubation, and conscious sedation
- An understanding of the diagnosis and management of urgent and emergent problems in gynecologic, neurological, orthopaedic, and urologic surgery
- Source: American Board of Surgery

Prerequisites; Length of Training

No prior GME is required. ACGME-accredited programs in general surgery are 5 years.

Subspecialties

Subspecialty programs accredited by the ACGME

- Hand surgery
- Pediatric surgery
- Surgical critical care
- Vascular surgery

American Board of Surgery subspecialty certificates

- Hospice and palliative medicine
- Pediatric surgery
- Surgery of the hand
- Surgical critical care
- Vascular surgery (general certificate)

Surgery residency performance data for board certification examinations

The American Board of Surgery has posted online the 5-year average pass rate of first-time examinees for all ACGME-accredited surgery residency programs on the Surgery Qualifying and Surgery Certifying Examinations, as well as a combined first-time pass rate for both examinations. These data are intended for use by medical students who are interested in surgical residencies, as one factor that may be relevant in choosing which programs to pursue.

Transitional Year

Description

The objective of the transitional year is to provide a well-balanced program of GME in multiple clinical disciplines to facilitate the choice of and/or preparation for a specific specialty. The transitional year is not meant to be a complete graduate education program in preparation for the practice of medicine.

Source: Transitional Year Program Requirements, ACGME

Prerequisites; Length of Training

No prior GME is required. ACGME-accredited programs are 1 year.

Bigger paydays

Oncologists see largest average increase in 2007

Supply and demand mixing with quality-of-life issues drove the results of Modern Healthcare's annual survey of physician compensation, which shows oncologists, pathologists and psychiatrists receiving on average double-digit pay increases in 2007, and the average compensation for orthopedic surgeons, invasive cardiologists, radiologists and gastroenterologists topping $400,000.

Collected from 14 healthcare-staffing groups and trade organizations, the survey tracks compensation for 20 specialties. Dermatologist, gastroenterologist, invasive cardiologist and plastic surgeon compensation are included in the survey for the first time.

The compensation range for some specialties is particularly dramatic, with more than a $200,000 difference between the top and bottom numbers for dermatologists, gastroenterologists, invasive cardiologists, and oncologists. The biggest gap was in compensation for dermatologists, which ranges from $465,000 to $223,000. In contrast, the ranges for hospitalists and internists are less than $26,000. For hospitalists, the top number provided is $201,357—only $22,457 higher than the lowest figure of $178,900.

For some specialties, compensation can be linked to supply and demand, but for others—particularly emergency medicine—this year's figures have more-complex explanations. Although the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention released figures last month showing that there were 5 million more emergency-room visits in 2005 than 2004 and total visits reached an all-time high of 115 million, average ER physician compensation increased only 6.25%—less than half the increase registered for oncologists.

"There is an ER crunch," says Travis Singleton, vice president of marketing with Irving, Texas-based recruiter Merritt, Hawkins & Associates, one of the groups participating in the survey. "But just because numbers have risen less than expected doesn't mean there is less of a demand. With ER physicians, I think we've hit a plateau and groups are doing other things to be attractive."

According to the survey, compensation for emergency physicians ranges $272,500 to $207,600. Singleton says salaries have just about reached the threshold that most emergency-medicine groups can afford to offer, so they are offering a shorter workday instead. Where 12-hour shifts were once the norm, he says today's emergency doctor may only have to fill an eight- to 10-hour slot and work during the busiest trauma times only once or twice a month.

"The buzzwords for the new physician are 'quality of life,' " he says. "An ER physician coming out of training can get a job anywhere and be paid something that—by some people—would be considered too much."

Singleton also says some rural hospitals now

fill emergency positions with family physicians, internists and general surgeons who choose to work in a rural ER because of the quality-of-life benefits provided by shift work.

Gabe Heckt, vice president of the Irving, Texas-based healthcare staffing firm Martin, Fletcher, says that the aging population is affecting the demand and compensation for the specialties that see older patients. Beyond that, another major trend is the rise in employed physicians, which he says is related to quality-of-life issues. He adds that his firm recently placed some general surgeons who "walked away" from private practices where they were making between $285,000 and $300,000 for salaried positions where they will make between $210,000 and $230,000.

For psychiatrists and urologists, Singleton says compensation increases are more of a straightforward result of supply and demand, while double-digit growth in oncologists' compensation and high salaries for orthopedic surgeons are often the result of hospital or medical group marketing strategies.

At 13.9%, oncologists saw the biggest increase in average compensation to $336,676 in 2007. Advances in oncology have led to oncologists' salaries advancing past the $300,000 mark, Singleton says.

Similarly, Singleton says, "a good orthopedic surgeon is worth their weight in gold," but there is only so much gold available. "Groups have hit their limit of what they can offer, and we tell people it can be a very lengthy search" for groups or hospitals seeking to hire orthopedic surgeons, he says. Still, orthos registered the fifth-highest compensation increase in the survey. Their average compensation rose about 9.5% to $438,561 in 2007 from $400,579 in 2006. In 2007, their compensation ranges were from $481,221 to $359,000.

Psychiatrists have the third-biggest gain in compensation. Their average compensation rose about 10.9% to $208,108 in 2007 from $187,606 in 2006. The range for this year's survey is $288,490 to $177,334.

Ultimately, however, Singleton predicts that the biggest percentage increases in the near future will go to internists (whose average compensation is $185,140 in this year's survey) and family physicians (with average compensation of $170,212), with one factor being that offering a $10,000-to-$15,000 raise is more attractive to someone making $180,000 than it is to someone making $450,000. As with other specialties, another key factor will be demand. "I think it's going to remind people of the primary-care age of the '90s," he says.

Since recruiting new physicians is getting tougher, Singleton offers these important pieces of advice: "Make the physicians you have happy, so they don't leave," and understand how quality-of-life issues affect physicians' employment decisions. <<

Data Trackers

Fourteen groups provide numbers for survey

American Medical Group Association

■ The Alexandria, Va.-based trade group's Medical Group Compensation and Financial Survey was conducted in December 2006 in partnership with the Minneapolis-based accounting and consulting firm RSM McGladrey. The survey costs $235 for AMGA members and $485 for nonmembers. For more information, call Brad Vaudrey at 612-376-9530. Data submitted by the AMGA for Modern Healthcare's Physician Compensation Survey are preliminary and subject to change.

Cejka Search

■ The St. Louis-based physician and healthcare executive search firm has provided services exclusively to the healthcare industry for more than 25 years. Data reported were compiled from Cejka Search's proprietary database from January to December 2006. The compensation includes salaries, bonuses and estimated forms of cash compensation for 235 physicians in 16 specialties. For more information or to purchase the survey, contact Mary Barber at 314-726-1603.

Delta Physician Placement

■ The Irving, Texas-based physician-staffing firm's survey was conducted in April and is based on the surveys of 1,721 physicians representing more than 50 physician specialties at 530 organizations, including hospitals (65% of the sample), group practices (25%), managed-care or insurance plans (9%) and others (1%). Nationwide data are compiled from job offers and search assignments on an annual basis. For more information on the free survey, contact Mike Gianas at 800-521-5060, ext. 4113.

Hay Group

■ The Philadelphia-based consulting firm surveyed 118 organizations in September 2006. Included in the survey are salaries for 12,000 physicians representing 122 specialties. For more information or to purchase the survey, contact Jaclyn DiSciullo at 215-861-2388.

Hospital & Healthcare Compensation Service

■ The Oakland, N.J.-based consulting firm's survey of employed physicians is published each March. This year's 31st annual survey, conducted in January, includes 302 organizations and more than 21,412 physicians in 45 specialties. Organizations surveyed were hospitals (82.4%) and group practices (17.6%). For further information or to order the survey, which costs $295 plus shipping, call Erica Bednarz at 201-405-0075, ext. 13.

Jackson & Coker

■ The national, full-service physician-recruitment firm is based in Alpharetta, Ga. Specializing in locum tenens and permanent placement, Jackson & Coker offers solutions to any physician staffing opportunity. The data reported for this survey were compiled using an e-mail and Web-response system and were sent to more than 88,000 physicians nationwide. The free survey is available by contacting Edward McEachern at 800-272-2707.

Martin, Fletcher

■ The Irving, Texas-based healthcare staffing firm surveyed 3,549 physicians at 1,064 organizations representing 17 specialties for its annual Physician Compensation and Benefits Report, conducted from April 2006 to April 2007. For more information about the complimentary report, contact Dana Bucher at 800-668-8822.

MD Network

■ The Coppell, Texas-based healthcare staffing firm publishes an annual Physician Compensation, Incentives and Benefits Survey. The 2007 survey is based on data compiled during the 2006 calendar year and reflects information received from 4,726 physicians and 1,279 senior-level administrative personnel from hospitals and physician group practices. Physician compensation details are available for 32 different medical specialties and subspecialties in 48 states. For more information, call physician Mark Valentine at 972-745-9030.

Medical Group Management Association

■ The Englewood, Colo.-based professional membership association's annual physician compensation survey of members and nonmember practices represents 52,785 providers nationwide. This year's report will be published in August. To order a copy of the report, call 877-275-6462, ext. 1888. Data submitted by the MGMA for Modern Healthcare's Physician Compensation Survey are preliminary and subject to change based on further validation by the MGMA.

Medicus Partners

■ Dallas-based Medicus Partners conducted its fourth-annual Physician Compensation and Relocation Survey in March. Respondents totaled 3,827 and included practicing physicians as well as final-year residents and fellows. Compensation figures represent only in-practice physicians. For a free copy of the survey contact Jeff Katon at 888-260-4242, ext. 236.

Merritt, Hawkins & Associates

■ The survey tracks the Irving, Texas-based company's recruiting assignments from March 31, 2006, to April 1, 2007, and indicates the recruiting incentives offered by the firm's clients to recruit doctors in a wide range of specialties. It should be noted that financial recruiting incentives may vary on a regional basis. To receive a free copy of this survey, call Stephanie Godwin at 800-876-0500.

Pacific Cos.

■ Costa Mesa, Calif.-based Pacific Cos. surveyed 749 organizations from April 2006 to April 2007. The organizations represented include hospitals (58% of the sample), group practices (16%) and solo-practice physicians (26%). Data represent 15,895 physicians in 23 specialties. For more information, call Michael Moore at 800-741-7629.

Pinnacle Health Group

■ The Atlanta-based physician recruitment firm included 2006 first-year compensation information on hospital-employed and group-practice affiliated physicians working in 39 specialties. For a copy of the free survey, call Molly Howell at 800-492-7771.

Sullivan, Cotter and Associates

■ More than 180 organizations took part in the Detroit-based company's survey, including hospitals (62% of the sample), group practices (36%), managed-care or insurance plans (5%) and other plans including medical foundations and faculty practice plans (18%). The cost is $375 for survey participants, $1,500 for nonparticipating healthcare organizations and $3,000 for nonhealthcare providers. For more information or to order the survey, contact Janis D'Annunzio at 313-872-1760. Data submitted by Sullivan for Modern Healthcare's Physician Compensation Survey are preliminary and subject to change.

Section III

Accredited Graduate Medical Education Programs

Introduction

This section of the Directory contains a list of graduate medical education (GME) programs accredited by the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education (ACGME).

Programs are listed by specialty under the state and city of the sponsoring institution (refer to sample, below). Listed under the program name is the institution that sponsors the residency program, followed by the major participating institution(s), if any, which are recognized by at least one ACGME Residency Review Committee (RRC) as providing a major portion of required GME. Hospitals and other institutions that provide rotations of less than one-sixth of the program length or less than a total of 6 months are not listed in the Directory.

Listings contain the program director's name and program address, telephone and fax numbers, and e-mail address. Newly appointed program directors since the publication of last year's Directory are noted with an asterisk. Additional information on each program includes the ACGME-accredited length of the program and number of ACGME approved/offered positions. [Note: The published program length reflects the length approved by the RRC. The program may require or offer additional years; these data are included in FREIDA Online, at www.ama-assn.org/go/freida, and the GME Library on CD-ROM.] The program identification number appears at the bottom of each listing; the first three digits of this number indicate the specialty/subspecialty code (see "Specialties/Subspecialties with ACGME Program Requirements," p 173) and the next two the state code.

The Role of the ACGME

The population of programs listed in Section III is set by the ACGME, which shares with the AMA information about accreditation actions and other changes through regular electronic data transfers.

The Directory, as the official list of ACGME-accredited programs, generally reflects accreditation actions completed by December of the previous year. The data published in this edition were transferred from the ACGME to the AMA on January 16, 2008. Programs with withdrawal dates after this date are included in Section III. Readers are reminded that accreditation actions and related changes can alter the ACGME program population on a daily basis and that the Directory serves only as a "snapshot" of this population at a given moment. For updated information on ACGME-accredited programs, consult the ACGME Web site at www.acgme.org.

Preventive Medicine Programs

The preventive medicine programs listed in Section III include programs that offer areas of specialization in aerospace medicine, general preventive medicine, occupational medicine, and public health and general preventive medicine.

Transitional Year Programs

Transitional Year programs are available for physicians seeking broad clinical experience before entering GME in their chosen field or for physicians who have not yet decided on a medical specialty.

Combined Specialty Programs

Combined training consists of a coherent educational experience in two or more closely related specialty or subspecialty programs. The educational plan for combined training is approved by the specialty board of each of the specialties to assure that resident physicians completing combined training are eligible for board certification in each of the component specialties. Each specialty or subspecialty program is separately accredited by the ACGME through its respective Residency Review Committee (RRC). The duration of combined training is longer than any one of its component specialty programs standing alone, and shorter than all of its component specialty programs together. Applicants to combined specialty programs, listed in Appendix A, are encouraged to review requirements for admission to the certification process of each board (see Appendix B).

Restricted-entry GME Programs

Centers for Disease Control and Prevention Programs

GME programs at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) are usually open only to CDC physicians.

US Uniformed Services Programs

US Uniformed Services (Army, Navy, Air Force, Public Health Service) first-year GME positions are filled by graduates of accredited schools of medicine and osteopathic medicine. Only those individuals who have graduated from accredited US medical schools are eligible to apply for these first-year GME positions. The majority of the Uniformed Services' first-year GME positions are filled by individuals with an existing active duty service obligation. In most cases, only those individuals already serving in the Uniformed Services are eligible for appointment to military graduate year 2 and beyond residency positions. Graduates of non-US or non-Canadian medical schools are eligible to apply for graduate year 2 positions if they possess the standard ECFMG Certificate and have completed 1 year of GME training at an ACGME-accredited program.

It is important to note that an individual seeking to be trained in a Uniformed Services medical treatment facility must be qualified for appointment as a commissioned officer in the Uniformed Services. An active duty service obligation is required for participation in Uniformed Services GME training. Acceptance of GME applications from civilian applicants may vary among the four services. Selection priorities for Uniformed Services positions for year 2 and beyond are given to officers on active duty. For more information, interested individuals should contact their local Uniformed Services recruiting office.

In Section III, US Uniformed Services programs are identified with the text US Uniformed Services Program.

Programs on Probation

The Directory may include programs on probation. To check a program's current accreditation status, go to the ACGME Web site, www.acgme.org, click on "public," then click on "Search Through Accredited Programs and Sponsors" to look up information about programs and sponsors, including current accreditation status.

Disclaimer

It is the AMA's understanding that all institutions listed in the Graduate Medical Education Directory are required by law to include the phrase "EEO, M/F/D/V" on any information distributed for public view.

Sources for Additional Information

FREIDA Online (Fellowship and Residency Electronic Interactive Database Access), an Internet database available through the AMA home page at www.ama-assn.org/go/freida, offers additional information on GME programs. In addition, the GME e-Letter, a free monthly publication available via e-mail, offers news and updates on all facets of GME. Current/archive issues are available at www.ama-assn.org/go/gmenews.
